

English Judicial Recognition of a Right to Privacy

David John Seipp

Program on Information Resources Policy

Harvard University

Center for Information
Policy Research

Cambridge, Massachusetts

A publication of the Program on Information Resources Policy

ENGLISH JUDICIAL RECOGNITION OF A RIGHT TO PRIVACY

David John Seipp

October 1982, P-82-8

Project Director: Anthony G. Oettinger

The Program on Information Resources Policy is jointly sponsored by Harvard University and the Center for Information Policy Research.

Chairman: Anthony G. Oettinger

Director: John C. LeGates

Executive Director, Postal and Allied Arenas: John F. McLaughlin

Executive Director, Media and Allied Arenas: Benjamin M. Compaine

Executive Director, International and Allied Arenas: Oswald H. Ganley

Copyright © 1982 by the President and Fellows of Harvard College. Not to be reproduced in any form without written consent from the Program on Information Resources Policy, Harvard University, 200 Aiken, Cambridge, MA 02138. (617) 495-4114. Printed in the United States of America.

Printing 5 4 3 2 1

PROGRAM ON INFORMATION RESOURCES POLICY

Harvard University

Center for Information Policy Research

Contributors

10/1/82

Abt Associates Inc.
 Action for Children's Television
 Aetna Life & Casualty Co.
 American Broadcasting Companies, Inc.
 American District Telegraph Co.
 American Telephone & Telegraph Co.
 Arthur D. Little, Inc.
 Auerbach Publishers Inc.
 Automated Marketing Systems
 A.H. Belo Corp.
 Berner & Berner
 The Boston Globe
 Booz-Allen Hamilton
 Canada Post
 CBS Inc.
 Channel Four Television Co. (Ltd.)
 (United Kingdom)
 Citibank N.A.
 Codex Corp.
 Communications Workers of America
 Computer & Communications Industry Assoc.
 COMSAT
 Continental Cablevision, Inc.
 Continental Telephone Corp.
 Copley Newspapers
 Cox Enterprises, Inc.
 Department of Communications (Canada)
 Des Moines Register and Tribune Co.
 Dialog Information Services, Inc.
 Digital Equipment Corp.
 Direction Générale
 des Télécommunications (France)
 Diversified Communications, Inc.
 Doubleday, Inc.
 Dow Jones & Co., Inc.
 Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.
 Dun & Bradstreet
 Economics and Technology, Inc.
 Federal Reserve Bank of Boston
 Field Enterprises, Inc.
 First National Bank of Chicago
 France Telecom (France)
 Frost & Sullivan
 Gannett Co., Inc.
 Gartner Group, Inc.
 General Electric Co.
 General Telephone & Electronics
 Hallmark Cards, Inc.
 Hambrecht & Quist
 Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc.
 Hazel Associates
 Honeywell, Inc.
 Hughes Communication Services, Inc.
 E.F. Hutton and Co., Inc.
 IBM Corp.
 Information Gatekeepers, Inc.
 International Data Corp.
 International Resource Development, Inc.
 Invoco AB Gunnar Bergvall (Sweden)
 Irving Trust Co.
 Knowledge Industry Publications, Inc.
 Kokusai Denshin Denwa Co., Ltd. (Japan)
 Lee Enterprises, Inc.
 MCI Telecommunications, Inc.
 McKinsey & Co., Inc.
 Mead Data Central
 Minneapolis Star and Tribune Co.
 MITRE Corp.
 Motorola, Inc.
 National Association of Letter Carriers
 NCR Corp.
 National Telephone Cooperative Assoc.
 New York Times Co.
 Nippon Electric Co. (Japan)
 Norfolk & Western Railway Co.
 Northern Telecom Ltd. (Canada)
 The Overseas Telecommunications Commission (Australia)
 Pearson Longman Ltd. (United Kingdom)
 Pitney Bowes, Inc.
 Public Agenda Foundation
 Reader's Digest Association, Inc.
 Research Institute of Telecommunications and Economics (Japan)
 St. Regis Paper Co.
 Salomon Brothers
 Satellite Business Systems
 Scaife Family Charitable Trusts
 Scott & Fetzer Co.
 Seiden & de Cuevas, Inc.
 Source Telecomputing Corp.
 Southern Pacific Communications Co.
 Standard Shares
 Time Inc.
 Times Mirror Co.
 Times Publishing co.
 Torstar Corp. (Canada)
 United Parcel Service
 United States Government:
 Central Intelligence Agency
 Department of Commerce:
 National Technical Information Service
 National Telecommunications and Information Administration
 Department of Defense:
 Office of the Under Secretary of Defense for Policy
 Department of Energy
 Federal Communications Commission
 Internal Revenue Service
 National Aeronautics and Space Admin.
 National Communications System
 National Security Agency
 United States Postal Rate Commission
 United States Postal Service
 U.S. - Japan Foundation
 United Telecommunications, Inc.
 Veronis, Suhler & Associates, Inc.
 Voice of America
 Warner Amex Cable Communications Inc.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Special thanks are due to the following persons who reviewed and commented critically on drafts of this report. These persons and the Program's affiliates are not, however, responsible for or necessarily in agreement with the views expressed herein, nor should they be blamed for any errors of fact or interpretation.

P. S. Atiyah

Clare Dalton

Lucy A. Hummer

M. D. Kirby

Colin Tapper

Raymond I. Wacks

Jane Yurow

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Standard treatises on English law will say that England has no right of action comparable to the American right to privacy. But, since 1979, decisions of the English courts have invoked an explicit "right to privacy" in many contexts:

- * Private Property. Searches stop at the Englishman's "castle" door when statutory authorization does not specifically allow entry into homes and offices. Concern for privacy also curtails court-ordered "surprise" searches on behalf of civil litigants.
- * Confidential Communication. Courts restrain and punish the publication of secrets communicated in the course of marriage, employment, and court proceedings. Official wiretapping, permissible under English law, is being challenged under the European Convention on Human Rights.
- * Personal Information. Financial and employment records of non-parties are safe from exposure in civil suits. Courts hint at the availability of a remedy for excesses of investigative journalism.

This report traces the development of the English judiciary's role in the protection of privacy from the nineteenth century to the present day. It also considers proposals for a statutory right to privacy in England and the role of international conventions protecting privacy. The report concludes with an analysis of the "new" right to privacy in England, and a comparative look at privacy protection in other English-speaking jurisdictions.

Some thirty inches from my nose,
The frontier of my Person goes,
And all the untilled air between
Is private pagus or demesne.
Stranger, unless with bedroom eyes
I beckon you to fraternize,
Beware of rudely crossing it:
I have no gun, but I can spit.

-- W.H. Auden, Prologue:

The Birth of Architecture

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
Table of Cases	iv
Table of Statutes	xviii
I. INTRODUCTION	1
II. THE DEFINITION OF PRIVACY	4
A. The Definitional Quagmire	4
B. Toward a Pragmatic Legal Definition of Privacy	6
III. THE NINETEENTH CENTURY ENGLISH LAW OF PRIVACY	10
A. Private Property	10
B. Confidential Communications	12
C. Personal Information	15
IV. OTHER ROUTES TO RECOGNITION	18
A. Statutory Proposals	18
B. International Protection of Human Rights	20
V. RECENT JUDICIAL INITIATIVES	24
A. Private Property	24
B. Confidential Communication	26
C. Personal Information	29
VI. ANALYTICAL AND COMPARATIVE OVERVIEW	31
A. The Scope of the Right	31
B. Sources of the Right	33
C. Privacy in Other English-Language Jurisdictions	34
VII. CONCLUSIONS	38
NOTES	41
BIBLIOGRAPHY	99

TABLE OF CASES

- A.B. v. C.D., 14 D. 177 (Scot. Sess. 1851). n. 378.
- Adams v. Lloyd, 3 H. & N. 351, 157 Eng. Rep. 506 (Exch. 1858).
 nn. 135, 136.
- In re Agar-Ellis, 24 Ch. D. 317 (C.A. 1883). . . p. 20, n. 130.
- Akar v. Attorney-General of Sierra Leone, [1970] A.C. 853,
 [1969] 3 All E.R. 384, [1969] 3 W.L.R. 970 (P.C. 1969). n. 372.
- Albert (Prince) v. Strange, 2 De G. & Sm. 652, 64 Eng. Rep. 293
 (Ch. 1849), aff'd, 1 Mac. & G. 25, 41 Eng. Rep. 1171, 1 H. &
 Tw. 1, 47 Eng. Rep. 1302 (Ch. 1849).
 pp. 22, 39, 40, 48, nn. 152-55, 301, 309.
- Annesley v. Anglesea (Earl), 17 Howell St. Tr. 1139 (Ir. Exch.
 1743). p. 19, n. 117.
- Anton Piller KG v. Manufacturing Processes Ltd., [1976] Ch. 55,
 [1976] 1 All E.R. 779, [1976] 2 W.L.R. 162 (C.A. 1975). n. 280.
- Argyll v. Argyll, [1967] Ch. 302, [1965] 1 All E.R. 611, [1965]
 2 W.L.R. 790 (1964). p. 40, nn. 308-09.
- Attorney-General for Canada v. Attorney-General for Ontario, [1937] A.C. 326 (P.C.). n. 231.
- Attorney-General v. Edison Telephone Co., 6 Q.B. 244 (Exch.
 1880). n. 115.
- Barritt v. Attorney-General, [1971] 3 All E.R. 1183, [1971] 1
 W.L.R. 1713 (P. 1969). n. 299.
- Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J. Misc. 633, 16 A.2d 80 (Ch. 1940).
 n. 318.
- Bembridge v. Latimer, 10 L.T. (n.s.) 816 (C.P. 1864). . n. 149.
- Berd v. Lovelace, Cary 62, 21 Eng. Rep. 33 (Ch. 1577). . n. 117.
- Bernstein (Lord) v. Skyviews & Gen. Ltd., [1978] Q.B. 479,
 [1977] 2 All E.R. 902, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 136 (1977).
 p. 35, nn. 264-66.
- Re Berridge's Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 125 (Lands Trib.
 1954). n. 261.
- Borough of Stroud, 2 O'M. & H. 107 (Election Petitions 1874). .
 n. 114.
- Borough of Taunton, 2 O'M. & H. 66 (Election Petitions 1874). .

- n. 114.
- Bostock v. Saunders*, 2 W. Bl. 912, 96 Eng. Rep. 539 (C.P. 1773). n. 73.
- Briant v. Prudential Assurance Co. Ltd.*, [1976] 1 Lloyd's L.R. 533 (C.A. 1975). n. 327.
- British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd.*, [1981] A.C. 1096, [1981] 1 All E.R. 417, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774 (1980). p. 42, nn. 329-30.
- Broad v. Pitt*, 3 Car. & P. 518, 172 Eng. Rep. 528, M. & M. 233, 173 Eng. Rep. 1142 (C.P. 1828). n. 123.
- Browne v. Flower*, [1911] 1 Ch. 226. n. 259.
- Bruce v. Rawlins*, 3 Wils. K.B. 61, 95 Eng. Rep. 934 (C.P. 1770). n. 73.
- Buccleuch (Duke) v. Metropolitan Bd. of Works*, L.R. 4 E. & I. App. 418 (1872). n. 93.
- Burdett v. Abbott*, 14 East 1, 104 Eng. Rep. 501 (K.B. 1811), aff'd, 4 Taun. 401, 128 Eng. Rep. 384 (Exch. Ch. 1812), aff'd, 5 Dow. 165, 3 Eng. Rep. 1289 (Ch. 1817). . . p. 14, nn. 71, 79.
- Burnett v. The Queen in Right of Canada*, 23 Ont.2d 109 (High Ct. 1979). n. 386.
- Byrne v. Kinematograph Renters Soc'y Ltd.*, [1958] 2 All E.R. 579, [1958] 1 W.L.R. 762 (Ch.). n. 327.
- Cadell v. Davies*, Mor. Literary Property, App. pt. 1, no. 4 (Scot. 1864). n. 377.
- Caird v. Sime*, 12 App. Cas. 326 (H.L. (Sc.) 1887). . . n. 377.
- Cates v. Hardacre*, 3 Taunt. 424, 128 Eng. Rep. 168 (C.P. 1811). n. 136.
- Chandler v. Thompson*, 3 Camp. 80, 170 Eng. Rep. 1312 (N.P. 1811). p. 15, nn. 84, 86.
- Chelmsford Corp. v. Secretary of State for the Environment*, 70 Knight's Local Gov't R. 89 (Q.B. 1971). n. 263.
- Cherrington v. Abney*, 2 Vern. 646, 33 Eng. Rep. 1022 (Ch. 1709). p. 14, n. 81.
- Chic Fashions (West Wales) Ltd. v. Jones*, [1968] 2 Q.B. 299, [1968] 1 All E.R. 229, [1968] 2 W.L.R. 201 (C.A. 1967). n. 270.
- Church of Scientology of Cal. v. Department of Health and Soc.*

- Security, [1979] 3 All E.R. 97, [1979] 1 W.L.R. 723 (C.A. 1979). n. 295.
- Clark v. Freeman, 11 Beav. 112, 50 Eng. Rep. 759 (Ch. 1848). n. 151.
- Clinch v. Inland Revenue Comm'rs, [1974] Q.B. 76, [1973] 1 All E.R. 977, [1973] 2 W.L.R. 862 (1973). n. 314.
- Clowser v. Chaplin, 72 Crim. App. 342 (Q.B. 1981). nn. 272, 273.
- Coco v. A.N. Clark (Engineers) Ltd., [1969] Pat. Cas. 41 (Ch. 1968). n. 306.
- Congreve v. Home Office, [1976] Q.B. 629, [1976] 1 All E.R. 697, [1976] 2 W.L.R. 291 (C.A. 1975). n. 272.
- Cooper v. Booth, 3 Esp. 135, 170 Eng. Rep. 564, 1 T.R. 535, 99 Eng. Rep. 1238 (K.B. 1785). n. 73.
- Corelli v. Wall, 22 T.L.R. 532 (C.A. 1906). n. 160.
- Cossey v. London, Brighton, & S. Coast Ry. Co., L.R. 5 C.P. 146 (1870). n. 120.
- Cotterell v. Griffiths, 4 Esp. 69, 170 Eng. Rep. 644 (K.B. 1801). n. 85.
- Cowley v. Cowley, Times, Jan. 20, 1897, at 13, col. 3 (P., Jan. 19, 1897). n. 126.
- Cunningham v. Phillips, 6 M. 926 (Scot. Sess. 1868). n. 380.
- Da Costa v. Jones, 2 Cowp. 729, 98 Eng. Rep. 1331 (K.B. 1778). n. 137.
- Dakin's Case, 1 Lewin Cr. Cas. 166, 168 Eng. Rep. 999 (Lancaster Assizes 1828). n. 74.
- Re Davies's Application, 25 P. & C.R. 115 (Lands Trib. 1971). n. 261.
- Davis v. McArthur, 17 D.L.R.3d 760 (B.C. C.A. 1971). n. 391.
- Director of Pub. Prosecutions v. Withers, [1975] A.C. 842, [1974] 3 All E.R. 984, [1974] 3 W.L.R. 751 (1974). p. 40, nn. 164, 286, 313.
- Ditchburn v. Goldsmith, 4 Camp. 152, 171 Eng. Rep. 49 (N.P. 1815). n. 137.
- Dixon v. Holden, L.R. 7 Eq. 488 (1869). n. 156.

- Dockrell v. Dougall, 80 L.T. 556, 15 T.L.R. 333 (C.A. 1899). n. 160.
- Doker v. Hasler, Ry. & M. 198, 171 Eng. Rep. 992 (N.P. 1824). p. 20, n. 128.
- Dyson v. Attorney-General, [1911] 1 K.B. 410 (C.A. 1910). n. 311.
- East India Co. v. Kynaston, 3 Bli. 153, 4 Eng. Rep. 561 (Ch. 1821). n. 281.
- Edwards v. Edwards, [1967] 2 All E.R. 1032, [1968] 1 W.L.R. 149 (P. 1967). n. 320.
- EMI Ltd. v. Pandit, [1975] 1 All E.R. 418, [1975] 1 W.L.R. 302 (Ch. 1974). n. 282.
- Entick v. Carrington, 19 Howell St. Tr. 1029, 2 Wils. K.B. 275, 95 Eng. Rep. 807 (C.P. 1765). p. 47, nn. 72, 77, 133.
- Epstein v. Epstein, 1906 T.H. 87 (Witwatersrand High Ct.). n. 407.
- Re F (a minor), [1977] Fam. 58, [1977] 1 All E.R. 114, [1976], 3 W.L.R. 813 (C.A. 1976). n. 299.
- Firma J. Nold KG v. Commission of the European Communities, [1974] C.J. Comm. E. Rec. 491, 14 Comm. Mkt. L.R. 338. n. 241.
- Foster v. Bank of London, 3 F. & F. 214, 176 Eng. Rep. 96 (N.P. 1862). n. 142.
- Francis v. Chief of Police, [1973] A.C. 761, [1973] 2 All E.R. 251, [1973] 2 W.L.R. 505 (P.C.). n. 372.
- Frank Truman Export Ltd. v. Metropolitan Police Comm'r, [1977] Q.B. 952, [1977] 3 All E.R. 431, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 257 (1976). n. 271.
- Fraser v. Evans, [1969] 1 Q.B. 349, [1969] 1 All E.R. 8, [1968] 3 W.L.R. 1172 (C.A. 1968). n. 306.
- Friend v. London, Chatham, & Dover Ry. Co., L.R. 2 Ex. D. 437 (1877). n. 120.
- Friend v. Skelton, 17 D. 548 (Scot. Sess. 1855). n. 379.
- Funston v. Pearson, Times, Mar. 12, 1915, at 3, col. 3 (K.B., Mar. 11, 1915). n. 161.
- Gabbitas v. Gabbitas, Times, Dec. 5, 1967, at 3, col. 1 (P., Dec. 5, 1967). n. 288.

- Gee v. Pritchard, 2 Swan. 402, 36 Eng. Rep. 670 (Ch. 1818). p. 17, nn. 101, 151.
- Ghani v. Jones, [1970] 1 Q.B. 693, [1969] 3 All E.R. 1700, [1969] 3 W.L.R. 1158 (C.A. 1969). p. 36, nn. 270, 271.
- Gilham's Case, 1 Moody's Crown Cases 186 (Taunton Assizes 1828). n. 121.
- Gokal Prasad v. Radho, 10 Indian L.R. Allahbad 358 (High Ct. 1888). n. 409.
- Govind v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 1975 A.I.R. (S.C.) 1378, [1975] 2 S.C.R. 148 (Ind.). n. 411.
- Great Central Ry. Co. v. Bates, [1921] 3 K.B. 578 (C.A.). n. 269.
- Greenlaw v. King, 1 Beav. 137, 48 Eng. Rep. 891 (Ch. 1838). n. 122.
- Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 M. & K. 98, 39 Eng. Rep. 618 (Ch. 1833). n. 118.
- Grieg v. Grieg, [1966] Vict. R. 379. n. 399.
- Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965). nn. 10, 410.
- Grove v. Eastern Gas Bd., [1952] 1 K.B. 77, [1951] 2 All E.R. 1051 (C.A. 1951). n. 255.
- Haisman v. Smelcher, [1953] Vict. L.R. 625. n. 398.
- Halcon Int'l Inc. v. Shell Transp. & Trading Co., [1979] Pat. Cas. 97 (Ch. 1978). n. 295.
- Hardy v. Vesey, L.R. 3 Ex. 107 (1868). n. 144.
- Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338 (H.L.). pp. 38, 46, 47, nn. 11, 296-98.
- Harrison v. Rutland (Duke), [1893] 1 Q.B. 142 (C.A. 1892). n. 94.
- Harrison v. Southcote, 1 Atk. 528, 26 Eng. Rep. 333 (Ch. 1751). n. 135.
- Re Henderson's Conveyance, [1940] 1 Ch. 835. n. 258.
- Hickman v. Maisey, [1900] 1 Q.B. 752 (C.A.). n. 95.
- Hinds v. The Queen, [1976] 1 All E.R. 353, [1976] 2 W.L.R. 366 (P.C. 1975). n. 372.

- Home Office v. Harman, [1981] Q.B. 534, [1981] 2 All E.R. 349,
[1981] 2 W.L.R. 310 (C.A.). nn. 11, 297.
- Re M. Howard (Mitcham) Ltd.'s Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 219
(Lands Trib. 1956). n. 261.
- Huckle v. Money, 2 Wils. K.B. 205, 95 Eng. Rep. 768 (C.P.
1763). n. 72.
- Re Hussey, 18 Crim. App. 160 (C.A. 1924). n. 254.
- Hutton v. Esher Urban Dist. Council, [1972] Ch. 515, [1972] 3
All E.R. 504, [1972] 3 W.L.R. 62, rev'd, [1974] Ch. 167, [1973]
2 All E.R. 1123, [1973] 2 W.L.R. 917 (C.A. 1973). . . . n. 272.
- Ince's Case, 20 L.T. (n.s.) 421 (Election Petitions 1869). . .
. n. 114.
- Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd., [1980] A.C.
952, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1 (1979).
. pp. 36, 37, nn. 11, 274-76, 279.
- ITC Film Distribs. Ltd. v. Video Exch. Ltd., Times, June 17, 1982 (C.A., June 15, 1982) n. 284.
- James Buchanan & Co., Ltd. v. Babco Forwarding & Shipping
(U.K.) Ltd., [1977] Q.B. 208, [1977] 1 All E.R. 518, [1977] 2
W.L.R. 107 (C.A. 1976), aff'd on other grounds, [1978] A.C.
141, [1977] 3 All E.R. 1048, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 907 (1977)
. n. 237.
- Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H.L.C. 815, 10 Eng. Rep. 681 (1854). . .
. n. 98.
- Jennison v. Baker, [1972] 2 Q.B. 52, [1972] 1 All E.R. 997,
[1972] 2 W.L.R. 429, (C.A. 1971). n. 206.
- John Leng & Co. Ltd. v. Langlands, 114 L.T. (n.s.) 665 (H.L.
(Sc.) 1916). n. 382.
- Jones v. Tapling, 31 L.J.C.P. (n.s.) 342 (Exch. Ch. 1862), aff'd sub nom Tapling v. Jones, 11 H.L.C. 290, 11 Eng. Rep.
1344 (1865). p. 15, n. 87.
- Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 (1967). n. 358.
- Kelly v. Battershell, [1949] 2 All E.R. 830 (C.A.). . . n. 259.
- Kidson v. South Afr. Assoc. Newspapers Ltd., 1957 (3) S. Afr.
461 (Witwatersrand Local Div.). n. 408.
- The Case of the King's Prerogative in Saltpetre, 12 Co. Rep.
12, 77 Eng. Rep. 1294 (Sergeants' Inn 1606). n. 70.

- Kitson v. Playfair, Times, Mar. 28, 1896, at 5, col. 1 (Q.B., Mar. 27, 1896). n. 123.
- "Klass" Case, 2 E.H.R.R. (Eur. Ct. H.R. 1978). n. 229.
- Knowles v. Richardson, 1 Mod. Rep. 55, 86 Eng. Rep. 727 (K.B. 1670). n. 83.
- Krouse v. Chrysler Canada Ltd., 12 D.L.R.3d 463 (Ont. High Ct. 1970), decided on alternate grounds, 25 D.L.R.3d 49 (Ont. High Ct. 1972), rev'd, 1 Ont. 2d (C.A. 1974). n. 386.
- Lamb v. Munster, 10 Q.B.D. 110 (1882). n. 136.
- Lea v. Justice of the Peace Ltd., Times, Mar. 15, 1947, at 2, col. 7 (K.B., Mar. 14, 1947). n. 328.
- Leyman v. Latimer, 47 L.J. Ex. (n.s.) 470 (1878). n. 149.
- Lindley v. Rutter, [1981] Q.B. 128, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 660 (1980). nn. 11, 317.
- Loyd v. Freshfield, 2 Car. & P. 325, 172 Eng. Rep. 147 (C.P. 1826). n. 141.
- J. Lyons & Sons v. Wilkins, [1899] 1 Ch. 255 (C.A. 1898). n. 97.
- Lytton (Earl) v. Devey, 54 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 293 (1884). nn. 101, 105.
- M. v. M. (No. 1), [1967] P. 313, [1967] 1 All E.R. 870, [1967] 2 W.L.R. 1333. n. 320.
- Re MacIsaac, 25 D.L.R.3d 610 (B.C. Prov. Ct. 1972). n. 388.
- McIsaacs v. Robertson, 3 N.S.W.S. Ct. R. 51 (1864). n. 397.
- McPherson v. Daniels, 10 B. & C. 263, 109 Eng. Rep. 448 (K.B. 1829). n. 146.
- Malone v. Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (No. 2), [1979] Ch. 344, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700 (Ch. 1979). pp. 38, 46, 47, nn. 2, 164, 229, 289-291.
- Maneklal Motilal v. Mohanlal Narotundas, 44 Indian L.R. Bombay 496 (App. Civ. 1919). n. 409.
- Manners v. Johnson, 1 Ch. D. 673 (1875). p. 15, n. 89.
- Meade's Case, 1 Lewin Cr. Cas. 184, 168 Eng. Rep. 1006 (York Assizes 1823). n. 74.

- Medway v. Doublelock Ltd., [1978] 1 All E.R. 1261, [1978] 1
W.L.R. 710 (Ch. 1977). n. 294.
- Merest v. Harvey, 5 Taunt. 442, 128 Eng. Rep. 761 (C.P. 1814).
. p. 14, n. 78.
- Mexborough (Earl) v. Whitford Urban Dist. Council, [1897] 2
Q.B. 111 (C.A.). n. 134.
- Mhlongo v. Bailey, 1958 (1) S. Afr. 370 (Witwatersrand Local Div. 1957). n. 408.
- Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2303, 98 Eng. Rep. 201 (K.B. 1769). .
. p. 17, nn. 29, 102.
- Miller v. Jackson, [1977] Q.B. 966, [1977] 3 All E.R. 338,
[1977] 3 W.L.R. 20 (C.A.). p. 35, nn. 267-68.
- Minister of Home Affairs v. Fisher, [1980] A.C. 319, [1979] 3
All E.R. 21, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 889 (P.C. 1979). n. 372.
- Mohamed Ahmed El Naeem v. Adeel Osman, (1970) Sudan L.J. & R. 8
(Ct. App.). n. 412.
- Monroe v. Twistleton, Peake Add. Cas. 219, 170 Eng. Rep. 250
(N.P. 1802). n. 124.
- Monson v. Tussauds, Ltd. [1894] 1 Q.B. 671. . p. 23, nn. 158-59.
- Moore v. News of the World, [1972] 1 Q.B. 441, [1972] 1 All
E.R. 915, [1972] 2 W.L.R. 419 (C.A.). n. 328.
- Morgan v. Morgan, [1977] Fam. 122, [1977] 2 All E.R. 515,
[1977] 2 W.L.R. 712 (1976). n. 322.
- Morison v. Moat, 9 Hare 241, 68 Eng. Rep. 492 (Ch. 1852), aff'd
21 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 248 (1852). nn. 151, 302.
- Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283 (1980). pp. 37, 47, nn. 11, 277-78.
- Motherwell v. Motherwell, 73 D.L.R.3d 62 (Alta. Sup. Ct. 1976).
. n. 387.
- Re Munday's Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 130 (Lands Trib.
1954). n. 261.
- National Panasonic (U.K.) Ltd. v. Commission of the European Communities, [1981] I.C.R. 51, [1981] 2 All E.R. 1 (E.C.J.
1980). n. 242.
- Normanshaw v. Normanshaw, 69 L.T. (n.s.) 469 (P. 1893). n. 121.
- O'Connor v. Marjoribanks, 4 Man. & G. 435, 134 Eng. Rep. 179

- (C.P. 1842). n. 124.
- O'Keefe v. Argus Printing & Publishing Co. Ltd., 1954 (3) S. Afr. 244 (Cape Provincial Div.). n. 408.
- Oliver v. Oliver, 11 C.B. (n.s.) 139, 142 Eng. Rep. 748 (1861). n. 103.
- O'Shea v. Wood, [1891] P. 286 (C.A.). n. 116.
- Owen v. Gadd, [1956] 2 Q.B. 99, [1956] 2 All E.R. 28, [1956] 2 W.L.R. 945 (C.A.). n. 259.
- Pan-American World Airways Inc. v. Department of Trade, [1976] 1 Lloyd's L.R. 257 (C.A.). n. 239.
- Pankhurst v. Hamilton, 3 T.L.R. 500 (Q.B. 1887). n. 150.
- Pavesich v. New England Life Ins. Co, 122 Ga. 190, 50 S.E. 68 (1905). n. 10.
- Pearse v. Pearse, 11 Jur. 52 (Ch. 1847). p. 19, n. 119.
- Re Penny, 7 El. & Bl. 660, 119 Eng. Rep. 1390 (Q.B. 1857). n. 93.
- Perceval v. Phipps, 2 Ves. & Beam. 19, 35 Eng. Rep. 225 (Ch. 1813). p. 17, n. 100.
- Plumb v. Jeyes' Sanitary Compounds Co., Ltd., Times, Apr. 15, 1937, at 4, col. 4 (K.B., Apr. 14, 1937). nn. 161, 328.
- Pollard v. Photographic Co., 40 Ch. D. 345 (1888). p. 23, n. 157.
- Pope v. Curl, 2 Atk. 341, 26 Eng. Rep. 608 (Ch. 1741). n. 99.
- Potts v. Smith, L.R. 6 Eq. 311 (1868). p. 15, n. 88.
- Pye v. Butterfield, 5 B. & S. 829, 122 Eng. Rep. 1038 (Q.B. 1864). n. 134.
- Queensberry (Duke) v. Shebbeare, 2 Eden 329, 28 Eng. Rep. 924 (Ch. 1758). n. 98.
- Raffaelli v. Heatly, 1949 Scot. L.T. 284 (H.C.J.). n. 375.
- Ratcliffe v. Burton, 3 Bos. & Pul. 223, 127 Eng. Rep. 123 (C.P. 1802). n. 71.
- R. v. Adams, [1980] 1 Q.B. 575, [1980] 1 All E.R. 473, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 275 (C.A. 1979). nn. 11, 272.

- R. v. Atterbury (Bishop), 16 Howell St. Tr. 323 (Parl. 1723). n. 288.
- R. v. Barrett, unreported decision (C.A., June 23, 1980). n. 254.
- R. v. Blackburn, Times, June 6, 1974, at 4, col. 3 (Leeds Crown Ct., June 5, 1974). n. 286.
- R. v. Chief Immigration Officer, Heathrow Airport, ex parte Salamat Bibi, [1976] 3 All E.R. 843, [1976] 1 W.L.R. 979 (C.A.). p. 31, nn. 236, 240.
- R. v. Crown Court at Sheffield, ex parte Brownlow, [1980] Q.B. 530, [1980] 2 All E.R. 444, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 892 (C.A.). nn. 11, 324.
- R. v. Dennis, 69 J.P. 256 (Cent. Crim. Ct. 1905). n. 74.
- R. v. Derrington, 2 Car. & P. 418, 172 Eng. Rep. 189 (Hereford Assizes 1826) n. 116.
- R. v. Dyson, Times, Apr. 10, 1979, at 3, col. 5, (Barnsley Magis. Ct., Apr. 9, 1979). n. 266.
- R. v. Friend, 13 Howell St. Tr. 1 (K.B. 1696). n. 132.
- R. v. Griffin, 6 Cox C.C. 219 (Cent. Crim. Ct. 1853). n. 123.
- R. v. Grossman, 73 Crim. App. 302 (C.A. 1981). nn. 11, 325.
- R. v. Hay, 2 F. & F. 4, 175 Eng. Rep. 933 (Durham Assizes 1860). n. 121.
- R. v. James, 24 Q.B.D. 436 (1890). n. 107.
- R. v. Jones, 2 C. & K. 236, 175 Eng. Rep. 98 (Q.B. 1846). n. 107.
- R. v. Kingston (Duchess), 20 Howell St. Tr. 355 (H.L. 1776). n. 122.
- R. v. London Quarter Sessions [1948] 1 K.B. 670, [1948] 1 All E.R. 72 (1947). n. 286.
- R. v. Maqsd Ali, [1966] 1 Q.B. 688, [1965] 2 All E.R. 464, [1965] 3 W.L.R. 229 (1965). n. 288.
- R. v. Mills, [1962] 3 All E.R. 298, [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1152 (Q.B.). n. 288.
- R. v. Moir, 72 ANN. REG. 1830 at 344 (Chelmsford Assizes, July 30, 1830). n. 75.

- R. v. O'Brien, Times, July 5, 1923, at 11, col. 4 (Cent. Crim. Ct., July 4, 1923). n. 288.
- R. v. Padman, 36 F.L.R. 347 (Tasm. 1979). n. 400.
- R. v. Robson, [1972] 2 All E.R. 669, [1972] 1 W.L.R. 651 (Cent. Crim. Ct.). n. 288.
- R. v. Scully, 1 Car. & P. 319, 171 Eng. Rep. 1213 (Gloucester Assizes 1824). n. 74.
- R. v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, ex parte Bhajan Singh, [1976] Q.B. 198, [1975] 3 W.L.R. 225 (C.A. 1975). n. 234.
- R. v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, ex parte Phansopkar, [1976] Q.B. 606, [1975] 3 All E.R. 497, [1975] 3 W.L.R. 322 (C.A. 1975). n. 235.
- R. v. Senat, 52 Crim. App. 282 (C.A. 1968). n. 288.
- R. v. Sergeant, Times, Aug. 11, 1967, at 3, col. 1 (Newbury Magis. Ct., Aug. 10, 1967). n. 286.
- R. v. Stafford, [1973] 1 All E.R. 190, [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1649 (C.A. 1972). n. 202.
- R. v. Surrey Quarter Sessions Comm., ex parte Tweedie, 61 Knight's Local Gov't R. 464 (Q.B. 1963). n. 272.
- R. v. Symondson, 60 J.P. 645 (Cent. Crim. Ct. 1896). n. 74.
- R. v. Thornley, 72 Crim. App. 302 (C.A. 1980). nn. 11, 271.
- R. v. Withers, Times, June 17, 1971, at 1, col. 2 (Cent. Crim. Ct., June 16, 1971). nn. 11, 286.
- Ex parte Reynolds, 20 Ch. D. 294 (1882). n. 136.
- Reynolds v. Clarke, 1 Strange 634, 93 Eng. Rep. 747 (K.B. 1726). n. 53.
- Rhodes v. Graham, 238 Ky. 225, 37 S.W.2d 46 (1931). n. 358.
- Riddick v. Thames Board Mills, [1977] Q.B. 881, [1977] 3 All E.R. 677, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 63 (C.A.). p. 38, nn. 293, 294.
- Robbins v. C.B.C., 12 D.L.R.2d 35 (Quebec Super. Ct. 1957). n. 385.
- Roberson v. Rochester Folding Box Co., 171 N.Y. 538, 64 N.E. 442 (1902). n. 326.

- Robertson v. Keith, 1936 Sess. Cas. 29 (Scot.). . . . n. 376.
- Rumping v. Director of Pub. Prosecutions, [1964] A.C. 814,
[1962] 3 All E.R. 256, [1962] 3 W.L.R. 763 (1962). . . . n. 292.
- Ruthven v. De Bor, 45 Sol. J. 272 (Q.B. 1901). . . . n. 121.
- S. v. S., [1972] A.C. 24, [1970] 3 All E.R. 107, [1970] 3
W.L.R. 366 (1970). . . . n. 318.
- Saltman Eng'g Co. Ltd. v. Campbell Eng'g Co., Ltd., 65 Pat.
Cas. 203, [1963] 3 All E.R. 413 (C.A. 1948). . . . n. 307.
- Schering Chems. Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., [1981] 2 All E.R. 321,
[1981] 2 W.L.R. 848 (C.A.). . . . p. 47, nn. 11, 305.
- Science Research Council v. Nasse, [1980] A.C. 1028, [1979] 3
All E.R. 673, [1979] 3 W.L.R. 762 (1979). . . . n. 323.
- Scott v. Scott, [1913] A.C. 417. . . . n. 298.
- Semayne's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 91a, 77 Eng. Rep. 194 (K.B. 1605).
. . . . pp. 13, 37, n. 70.
- Sheen v. Clegg, Daily Telegraph, June 22, 1961. . . . n. 287.
- Sheriff v. Wilson, 17 D. 528 (Scot. Sess. 1855). . . . n. 379.
- Re Sloggetts (Properties), Ltd.'s Application, 7 Plan. & Comp.
78 (Lands Trib. 1952). . . . n. 261.
- Southam v. Smout, [1964] 1 Q.B. 308, [1963] All E.R. 104,
[1963] 3 W.L.R. 606 (C.A. 1963). . . . n. 254.
- Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Mer. 435, 35 Eng. Rep. 1006 (Ch. 1817).
. . . . n. 98.
- Sports & Gen. Press Agency, Ltd. v. "Our Dogs" Publishing Co.,
Ltd., [1916] 2 K.B. 880, aff'd [1917] 2 K.B. 125 (C.A.). . . .
. . . . n. 161.
- Stapleton v. Crofts, 18 Q.B. 367, 118 Eng. Rep. 137 (1852). . .
. . . . nn. 124, 126.
- Starr v. National Coal Bd., [1977] 1 All E.R. 243, [1977] 1
W.L.R. 63 (C.A. 1976). . . . n. 316.
- Stedall v. Houghton, 18 T.L.R. 126 (Ch. 1901). . . . n. 157.
- Stott v. Hefferon, [1974] 3 All E.R. 673, [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1270
(C.A.). . . . n. 272.
- Stroud v. Bradbury, [1952] 2 All E.R. 76 (Q.B.). . . . n. 255.

- Swales v. Cox, [1981] Q.B. 849, [1981] 1 All E.R. 1115, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 814 (1980). n. 254.
- Thermax Ltd. v. Schott Indus. Glass Ltd., 7 Fleet St. 289 (Ch. 1980). p. 37, nn. 11, 283-84.
- Thurston v. Charles, 21 T.L.R. 659 (K.B. 1905). n. 104.
- Tipping v. Clarke, 2 Hare 383, 67 Eng. Rep. 157 (Ch. 1843). p. 18, n. 143.
- Tolley v. J.S. Fry & Sons, Ltd., [1931] A.C. 333, reversing, [1930] 1 K.B. 467 (C.A.). pp. 2-3, 42, nn. 19-20, 326.
- Townley v. Rushworth, 62 Knight's Local Gov't R. 95 (Q.B. 1963). n. 254.
- Trehearne v. Trehearne, Times, Oct. 18, 1966, at 9, col. 1 (P., Oct. 17, 1966). n. 288.
- Turner v. Midgely, [1967] 3 All E.R. 601, [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1247 (Q.B.). n. 312.
- Turner v. Spooner, 30 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 801 (1861). n. 87.
- Victoria Park Racing & Recreation Grounds Co. Ltd. v. Taylor, [1937] Argus L.R. 597, 58 C.L.R. 479 (Austl. 1937). nn. 91, 396.
- W. v. W., Times, Mar. 21, 1981, at 6, col. 6, (Fam., Mar. 18, 1981). n. 322.
- Wakelin v. Secretary of State for the Environment, 77 Knight's Local Gov't R. 101 (C.A. 1978). n. 263.
- Walker v. Brewster, L.R. 5 Eq. 25 (1867). n. 92.
- Watkin's Case, Y.B. Hil. 3 Hen. 6, fo. 36, pl. 33 (1425). n. 53.
- Webb v. Minister of Hous. & Local Gov't, [1965] 2 All E.R. 193, [1965] 1 W.L.R. 755 (C.A.). n. 262.
- Webb v. Times Publishing Co., [1960] 2 Q.B. 535, [1960] 2 All E.R. 789, [1960] 3 W.L.R. 352. n. 328.
- Wennhak v. Morgan, 20 Q.B.D. 635 (1888). n. 127.
- Wheeler v. Le Marchant, 17 Ch. D. 675 (C.A. 1881). n. 122.
- Wild's Case, 2 Lewin Cr. Cas. 214, 168 Eng. Rep. 1132 (Liverpool Assizes 1837). n. 74.

- Wilkes v. Wood, Lofft 1, 98 Eng. Rep. 489 (C.P. 1763). . n. 72.
- Willcock v. Muckle, [1951] 2 K.B. 844, [1951] 2 All E.R. 367. .
 n. 312.
- Williams v. Settle, [1960] 2 All E.R. 806, [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1072
 (C.A.). n. 328.
- Wilson v. Reed, 2 F. & F. 149, 175 Eng. Rep. 1000 (N.P. 1860).
 n. 149.
- Wood v. Sandow, Times, June 30, 1914, at 4, col. 1 (K.B., June
 29, 1914). n. 161.
- Woodward v. Hutchins, [1977] 2 All E.R. 751, [1977] 1 W.L.R.
 760 (C.A.). n. 304.
- Wyatt v. Wilson, 1 Mac. & G. 46, 41 Eng. Rep. 1179, 1 H. & Tw.
 25, 47 Eng. Rep. 1311 (Ch. 1820). n. 152.
- Re X (a minor), [1975] Fam. 47, [1975] 1 All E.R. 697, [1975] 2
 W.L.R. 335 (C.A. 1974). nn. 2, 299, 300.
- Yousif v. Salama, [1980] 3 All E.R. 405, [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1540
 (C.A.). n. 283.
- Yovatt v. Winyard, 1 J. & W. 394, 37 Eng. Rep. 425 (Ch. 1820).
 n. 302.
- Y.B. Mich. 21 Hen. 7, fo. 39, pl. 50 (K.B. 1499). . . . n. 69.
- Y.B. Mich. 21 Hen. 7, fo. 30, pl. 5 (1504). n. 53.

TABLE OF STATUTES

Abolition of the Court of High Commission, 1641, 16 Ch. 1, ch. 11.	n. 133.
Ecclesiastical Commission Act, 1661, 13 Ch. 2, ch. 12.	n. 133.
Post Office Act, 1710, 9 Anne, ch. 10.	n. 106.
Post Office Act, 1837, 7 Wm. 4 & 1 Vict., ch. 36.	n. 106.
Lord Campbell's Act, 1843, 6 & 7 Vict., ch. 96.	n. 148.
Land Clauses Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 18.	n. 93.
Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 20.	n. 93.
Law of Evidence Amendment Act, 1851, 14 & 15 Vict., ch. 99.	n. 133.
Evidence Amendment Act, 1853, 16 & 17 Vict., ch. 83.	n. 125.
Copyright (Works of Art) Act, 1862, 25 & 26 Vict., ch. 68.	n. 157.
Thames Embankment Act, 1862, 25 & 26 Vict., ch. 93.	n. 93.
Telegraph Act, 1868, 31 & 32 Vict., ch. 110.	nn. 133, 199.
Post Office Protection Act, 1884, 47 & 48 Vict., ch. 76.	nn. 113, 199.
Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, 61 & 62 Vict., ch. 36.	nn. 125-26.
Official Secrets Act, 1911, 1 & 2 Geo. 5, ch. 28.	n. 201.
Census Act, 1920, 10 & 11 Geo. 5, ch. 41.	n. 201.
Law of Property Act, 1925, 15 & 16 Geo. 5, ch. 20.	n. 260.
Judicial Proceedings (Regulation of Reports) Act, 1926, 16 & 17 Geo. 5, ch. 61.	n. 202.
Population (Statistics) Act, 1938, 1 & 2 Geo. 6, ch. 12.	n. 201.
Education Act, 1944, 7 & 8 Geo. 6, ch. 31.	n. 272.
Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1949, 12, 13, & 14 Geo. 6, ch. 54.	n. 200.
Magistrates' Courts Act, 1952, 15 & 16 Geo. 6 & 1 Eliz. 2, ch. 55.	n. 203.

Post Office Act, 1953, 1 & 2 Eliz. 2, ch. 36.	nn. 199, 208.
Rights of Entry (Gas and Electricity Boards) Act, 1954, 2 & 3 Eliz. 2, ch. 21.	n. 255.
Television Act, 1954, 2 & 3 Eliz. 2, ch. 55.	n. 205.
Copyright Act, 1956, 4 & 5 Eliz. 2, ch. 74.	n. 204.
Obscene Publications Act, 1959, 7 & 8 Eliz. 2, ch. 56.	n. 272.
Rent Act, 1965, ch. 75.	n. 206.
Criminal Law Act, 1967, ch. 58.	nn. 254, 286.
Criminal Justice Act, 1967, ch. 80.	n. 202.
Theft Act, 1968, ch. 60.	n. 200.
Post Office Act, 1969, ch. 48.	nn. 106, 199.
Administration of Justice Act, 1970, ch. 31.	n. 207.
Unsolicited Goods and Services Act, 1971, ch. 30.	n. 209.
Road Traffic Act, 1972, ch. 20.	n. 272.
Consumer Credit Act, 1974, ch. 39.	n. 210.
Rehabilitation of Offenders Act, 1974, ch. 53.	n. 211.
Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act, 1976, ch. 82.	n. 212.
Finance Act, 1978, ch. 42.	n. 201.
New South Wales Listening Devices Act, 1969.	n. 404.
Queensland Invasion of Privacy Act, 1971.	n. 404.
Victoria Listening Devices Act, 1969.	n. 404.
Canadian Protection of Privacy Act, 1973-1974 Can. Stat., ch. 50.	nn. 393-94.
British Columbia Privacy Act, 1968 B.C. Stat., ch. 39.	n. 388.
British Columbia Landlord and Tenant Act, 1960 B.C. REV. STAT., ch. 207.	n. 388.
Manitoba Privacy Act, 1970 Man. Stat., ch. 74.	n. 389.
Saskatchewan Privacy Act, 1974 Sask. Stat., ch. 80.	n. 390.

ENGLISH JUDICIAL RECOGNITION OF A RIGHT TO PRIVACY

I. INTRODUCTION

The average Englishman's habits of reserve and regard for his own privacy are legendary.¹ It is surprising, therefore, that English courts have, shown great reluctance to recognize privacy as an interest worthy of legal protection in its own right.² The experience of other common law countries has not been the same; privacy law has flourished in the United States³ and has gained a foothold in Australia⁴ and Canada.⁵ Moreover, a right to privacy has received international recognition in the Universal Declaration on Human Rights,⁶ the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights,⁷ and the European Convention on Human Rights.⁸ Yet in England, Parliament has refused on a number of occasions to enact broad privacy protections,⁹ and the courts have been slow to find a grounding for privacy in the common law and in constitutional principles, as the American courts have done.¹⁰ Judicial pronouncements in the past few years, however, have come closer and closer to recognition of a general privacy interest protected by the common law, as one of the rights of every English subject.¹¹ It is instructive to compare the state of American law on the verge of its acceptance of a right to privacy.

When, in 1890, Samuel D. Warren and Louis D. Brandeis published their now famous article entitled The Right to Privacy,¹² American courts had already recognized a legally protected interest in personal privacy in a number of contexts.¹³ Doctrines of trespass, eavesdropping, defamation, unreasonable search and seizure, sanctity of the mails, and confidentiality of census information were among those extended by state and federal courts to protect what they explicitly denominated the "privacy" of the individual.¹⁴ Warren and Brandeis wanted the courts to carry this existing protection one step further, to restrain the publication of truthful information of a personal nature (in particular of candid photographs) in the newspaper press.¹⁵ The gradual extension of legal doctrines toward greater protection of privacy had stopped short of restraining the newspapers because the competing interest of freedom of the press had a secure constitutional niche and zealous advocates of its own. A catalyst was needed, other than the steady pressure of litigants seeking to vindicate their invaded privacy, and the article by Warren and Brandeis provided that catalyst.

In England, however, scholarly legal periodicals did not have this creative effect. Spurred on by calls for the recognition of a right to privacy from Canadian¹⁶ and Australian¹⁷ legal writers, Percy H. Winfield contributed an article to the Law Quarterly Review in 1931¹⁸ strongly urging the House of Lords to enunciate a general right of this kind in a case then before it, Tolley v. J.S. Fry & Sons, Ltd.¹⁹ The Law Lords instead exercised their imaginations to devise a remedy for the plaintiff, who had been the subject of caricature in a newspaper advertisement.²⁰ Since the failure of the Winfield article, English legal writers have looked to Parliament rather than to the courts for the initiative in this field.²¹ In Parliament, however, the organized power of the newspaper press has been the chief obstacle to enactment of a broad right to privacy.²² A further obstacle has been the effort of some legal scholars to demonstrate the intellectual bankruptcy of the "concept" of privacy.²³ Engendered in part by English lawyers alarm at the breadth of privacy law in the United States, this attempt at obfuscation has not deterred recent English courts from building up piecemeal the broad right rejected in the Tolley case. The courts make frequent and explicit references to "privacy" as the value they are concerned to protect.²⁴

This Paper traces the treatment of privacy in the English courts from the beginning of the nineteenth century to the present day. It attempts to set out the current status of judicial protection of privacy in England and to compare the experiences of the Scottish, Canadian, Australian, South African, and Indian courts with that of England's on the subject of privacy. First, however, the definitional difficulties posed by many legal scholars must be dealt with and a working definition of privacy must be proposed; Part II considers this problem of the definition of privacy. Part III then takes the history of privacy in the English courts up to the beginning of the twentieth century. Part IV, briefly outlines two proposed alternatives to judicial recognition -- parliamentary enactment of a right to privacy and domestication of international protections. Part V traces the recent judicial initiatives approaching full recognition of a right to privacy, and Part VI provides an analytical and comparative overview of the English courts' protection of individual privacy.

II. THE DEFINITION OF PRIVACY

A. The Definitional Quagmire

Warren and Brandeis, in their 1890 article, had not thought it necessary to define exactly what they meant by a "right to privacy," other than to equate it with Judge Thomas M. Cooley's formulation "the right to be let alone"²⁵ and their own phrase, "inviolable personality."²⁶ Their aim was the narrower one of advocating what they termed "the right to protect oneself from pen portraiture, from a discussion by the press of one's private affairs."²⁷ This narrower right against the press was hedged about with many of the same limitations as was the right to reputation protected by the tort of defamation.²⁸ An American magazine editor, writing shortly before Warren and Brandeis, defined the interest in privacy more broadly as "the value attached . . . to the power of drawing, each man for himself, the line between his life as an individual and his life as a citizen, or in other words, the power of deciding how much or how little the community shall see of him, or know of him."²⁹ This 1890 definition of privacy embodies the concept of individual control over information about oneself central to the now widely accepted formulation of Professor Alan Westin.³⁰

Early discussions of the law of privacy in England showed equally little interest in sophisticated attempts at precise legal definition.³¹ In suggesting that "offensive invasion of the personal privacy of another is (or ought to be) a tort," Professor Winfield had defined "infringement of privacy" as "unauthorized interference with a person's seclusion of himself or of his property from the public."³² By mid-century, English lawyers had a wealth of American judicial definitions from which to choose,³³ as well as the formulation of the International Society of Jurists (this remarkably similar to Judge Cooley's).³⁴ The effort to deny the possibility of any coherent definition of privacy did not begin in English legal literature³⁵ until attention turned to the possibility of Parliamentary enactment of a statutory right.³⁶ Proposed statutory language proved much more susceptible to attack on definitional grounds than did the imagined pronouncements of future courts.

Sir Kenneth Younger's Committee on Privacy issued its Report in 1972 advising against enactment of a general right to privacy.³⁷ In assessing competing claims to privacy and to free flow of information, the Committee majority found one major difficulty to be the "lack of any clear and generally agreed definition of what privacy itself is."³⁸ Replying to this objection, Professor D.N. MacCormick pointed out that the enactment of a right "is a fundamentally different procedure and process from the elucidation of a concept," and that in any case, the difficulty of choosing among alternative definitions is not a particularly good reason to avoid the choice.³⁹ Since then, the project of formulating a coherent legal definition of privacy has been undertaken by very able scholars in American and Australian legal journals.⁴⁰ The problem that the Younger Committee saw as definitional -- how to set limits on a right to privacy when it conflicts with other important interests -- was really a problem of lawmaking in a new area. Legislators can provide guidelines, for the courts and occasionally will do so in great detail, but legislators cannot expect more precision.⁴¹ Nevertheless, the argument that privacy is incapable of definition, or at any rate not worth defining, has reappeared recently in a Law Quarterly Review article by Raymond Wacks entitled The Poverty of "Privacy".⁴² Wacks urges that the concept "be refused admission to English law,"⁴³ and his reasons are worth examining in some detail.

Wacks finds the debate over contending definitions of privacy to be "sterile" because scholars proposing definitions rarely agree on their premises or objectives, and "futile" because where privacy is recognized, it simply means whatever the legislatures and courts say it means.⁴⁴ Neither of these objections goes to the impossibility of defining privacy; together, they indicate only that the confusion among legal scholars has not forestalled the continued use of the concept in courts and legislatures. Wacks relies more heavily on the argument that in America and in England privacy has become "almost irretrievably confused" with a number of other legal concepts. On the constitutional level, the U.S. Supreme Court has expanded the notion of privacy, in the area of sexual freedom, to be synonymous with individual autonomy "or, indeed, with freedom itself"; moreover, the Court has characterized unreasonable searches, forced disclosure of membership in associations, and prohibitions on the possession of obscene matter as invasions of privacy.⁴⁵ The common law tort of privacy in America has, according to Wacks, become confused with defamation and with the proprietary interest in one's name and likeness.⁴⁶ In England, privacy has become entangled with the action for breach of confidence -- a protection of trade secrets as well as intimate personal details -- and has been confused more generally with governmental claims to secrecy.⁴⁷ Finally, in both countries, computerized information collection has been labeled a privacy problem.⁴⁸ Wacks concludes that he would replace this overworked word with the phrase "personal information."⁴⁹

The definitional argument put forward by Wacks and developed in detail in his 1980 book, The Protection of Privacy, served only to heighten the fears of many English lawyers opposed to legal recognition of a general right to privacy.⁵⁰ Such fears arise from the uneasy feeling that privacy law in the United States has run rampant and has intruded into older, settled categories of the law. Wack's is not a jurisprudential argument that the word "privacy" is somehow less capable of bearing definite legal meanings than, say, such overworked words as "reasonableness" or "property."⁵¹ It is also not a policy argument that people claiming invasions of their privacy are just using that vocabulary to camouflage underlying, illegitimate interests.⁵² Wacks's argument appears to concede that people genuinely want privacy, and even that legal protection of individual privacy may be appropriate where it is incidental to relief for defamation or breach of confidence. But Wacks recoils at the twin prospects of, first, a wave of uncertainty as injuries that would have been remedied by an established doctrine such as defamation are brought to court under a new untested right to privacy, and second, a flood of unprecedented litigation as injuries that would not have been remedied at all under existing English law are brought to court for the first time. Such fear of the unknown has often been voiced before in opposition to proposed new remedies in the common law, remedies that seemed to burst the bounds of established legal categories.⁵³ The objection is a weighty one, but it does not go to the problem of definition as such.

B. Toward a Pragmatic Legal Definition of Privacy

As the main sections of this Paper will demonstrate, English courts since at least the mid-nineteenth century and quite frequently of late have referred to a legally protectible interest in "privacy" and even to a "right to privacy" in limited contexts. No elaborate or technical definition of privacy is required to interpret and understand these judicial pronouncements. To the extent that the English judiciary had any theoretical framework for their discussion of privacy,⁵⁴ it was the philosophical debate begun by J.S. Mill and later developed by Stephen and Montague.⁵⁵ "There is a limit to the legitimate interference of collective opinion with individual independence," wrote Mill in his essay On Liberty,⁵⁶ a limit he formulated elsewhere as "a circle around every individual human being, which no government . . . ought to be permitted to overstep," or "some space in human existence thus entrenched around, and sacred from authoritative intrusion."⁵⁷ By interference and intrusion Mill meant coercion as well as invasion of privacy, but even critics of Mill's broader principle of noninterference, among them James Fitzjames Stephen, conceded to Mill that "[l]egislation and public opinion ought in all cases whatever scrupulously to respect privacy."⁵⁸ A pragmatic legal definition of privacy attempts to discover what that limit has been in different historical periods by reconstructing the different "boundaries" asserted by litigants and judges in cases explicitly mentioning privacy as the interest protected.

Stephen, writing before he himself became a judge, recognized that "[t]o define the province of privacy distinctly is impossible."⁵⁹ A claim to privacy, if it is to be treated seriously, must be accepted at face value. To purport to dig behind such a claim for the "real" interest being protected -- hypothesizing sexual prudishness in some cases, concealment of commercially valuable information in others, disdain for inquisitive social inferiors in still others -- is a fundamentally misguided approach. An assertion of a privacy interest, if successful, will conceal forever the nature of the information sought to be kept private. Different people value their privacy to different degrees, and for different reasons.⁶⁰ It is possible, nevertheless, to find a general consensus on what facets of personal life are within the ambit of Mill's limit. As Stephen concluded, while precise definition is impossible, "[t]he common usage of language affords a practical test which is almost perfect upon this subject."⁶¹

Three sets of "boundaries," broadly construed, knit together the explicitly denominated "privacy" interests asserted in the English courts over the course of the nineteenth century and up to the present day. The first of these are the physical boundaries around private property, in particular the dwelling house of every individual or family.⁶² Such boundaries create a three-dimensional "private space" given legal protection against some (but certainly not all) unwanted intrusions of outsiders. They are barriers to the penetration of legal analysis: The interest in the privacy of private property may be asserted to prevent intruders from seeing something, from hearing something, or just from rendering the occupants uncomfortable. To the extent that the law respects these boundaries, the motive of concealment behind them is irrelevant. The amount of available legal protection will vary according to other factors, including the means of intrusion and the official or unofficial status of the intruder.

The second set of boundaries, those marking out confidential communications,⁶³ are less tangible than the physical boundaries of private property. Property in the contents of a literary work is a concept familiar to the common law, one capable of extension to the contents of a diary and a personal letter. A property basis for the protection of telephone conversations or face-to-face communication is more difficult to imagine. Grounded on a variety of legal doctrines, protections of confidentiality are sometimes dependent on the means of communications employed, sometimes on the relationship between the speakers. Like the protections of physical property, they are never treated as absolute barriers to disclosure.

Third, and least tangible of all, are the boundaries around personal information concerning private individuals,⁶⁴ information that may not be reduced to written or spoken form until the very act of privacy invasion complained of by the subject. Again, the boundaries are permeable and the protections they afford are variously grounded. Information about which a person could not be compelled to testify may be given up by that person for statistical, financial, or medical purposes on the understanding, enforceable by law, that the information shall not be used for any other purpose. There is also some legal recourse if personal information is published broadly to the subject's embarrassment or annoyance, through extensions of the law of defamation and that of breach of confidence. As in the era of Warren and Brandeis, this set of boundaries is the focus of the greatest concern and the greatest uncertainty.⁶⁵

III. THE NINETEENTH CENTURY ENGLISH LAW OF PRIVACY

A. Private Property

For Sir William Blackstone, the core of the institution of property was the ability to exclude others,⁶⁶ and no other species of property was so well hedged about with legal guarantees of exclusiveness than the dwelling house.⁶⁷ At the outset of the nineteenth century, that bulwark of Parliamentary rhetoric,⁶⁸ the popular maxim "an Englishman's house is his castle" summed up three lines of legal doctrine defending the householder against intruders. In its original application, the maxim embodied a broad privilege of self-defense for the occupant who met a felonious assault with deadly force.⁶⁹ According to Sir Edward Coke in Semayne's Case, a man's house was his castle "as well for his safety as for his repose,"⁷⁰ and therefore no sheriff executing a creditor's writ of attachment could break down the door to gain entrance.⁷¹ By the 1760s and 1770s, moreover, the Court of Common Pleas was protecting the subject's castle against the king himself, by striking down general search warrants⁷² and upholding large fines against revenue agents who committed unlawful trespass.⁷³

The nineteenth century Englishman thus had legitimate recourse to physical violence in defense of the dwelling house, as well as a legal remedy in trespass. Violent self-help could only be justified when a threat to the occupants' physical safety was feared,⁷⁴ but the popular imagination took the law of self-defense much further in this regard,⁷⁵ to protection of "the privacy and security that [made] possible all life, industry, and order."⁷⁶ The courts applied the trespass remedy to all unwelcome intrusions, howsoever motivated.⁷⁷ Exemplary damages of 500 pounds were awarded in one trespass case of 1814, for ungentlemanly conduct likened by the court to that of an intruder who "walks up and down before the window of [one's] house, and looks in while the owner is at dinner."⁷⁸ The high value placed by the law on "the private repose and security of every man in his own house," as Lord Chief Justice Ellenborough phrased it in 1811,⁷⁹ was in large measure an expression of a legally recognized interest in privacy.

Visitors to England in the nineteenth century remarked at the overwhelming preference for single family dwellings, high garden walls, and heavy locks.⁸⁰ Even so, every house needed windows for light and air, and inevitably houses might be situated so that the activities of neighbors in front rooms and gardens were visible from adjoining property without any actual trespass. Householders who had long enjoyed freedom from curious eyes sought legal protection throughout the nineteenth century when neighbors opened windows overlooking them. A longstanding doctrine of "ancient lights" had been applied to this situation. In a cryptically reported case of 1709, Cherrington v. Abney,⁸¹ the court announced that windows could not be altered to overlook of a neighboring owner, "if before . . . they could not look out of them into the yard, . . . for privacy is valuable."⁸² Still earlier, an equally cryptic report had provided the counterargument to be used by nineteenth century courts, "Why may not I build up a wall that another may not look into my yard?"⁸³ The uncertain state of the law was discussed by Mr. Justice LeBlanc in Chandler v. Thompson, an 1811 decision.⁸⁴ He had known of actions for privacy,⁸⁵ but had "heard it laid down by Lord Chief Justice Eyre that such an action did not lie."⁸⁶

Litigants persisted with actions based on doctrines of ancient lights, nuisance, and easements of privacy, but by the 1860s the courts' attitude had hardened against all such claims by neighbor against neighbor. Said Baron Bramwell in the 1865 case of Jones v. Tapling, "It is to be remembered that privacy is not a right. Intrusion on it is no wrong or cause of action."⁸⁷ With this judicial remedy thus foreclosed, householders enlisted the courts to help achieve private solutions: Potts v. Smith in 1868 allowed one neighbor to build a twenty-three foot wall cutting off his neighbor's vantage,⁸⁸ and Manners v. Johnson in 1875 enforced a covenant "that [an] act shall not be done the doing of which causes the invasion of privacy."⁸⁹ Yet in the absence of such independently initiated protections, the English householder at the close of the nineteenth century was at the mercy of curious and resourceful neighbors. A leading casebook on tort mentions a Balham dentist's unsuccessful complaint in 1904 against neighbors who arranged large mirrors in their garden in order to observe all that went on in his study and operating room.⁹⁰ To twentieth century commentators, such an absurd situation pointed out the existence of a gap in the legal protection of private property.⁹¹

Property owners had greater success in preventing observation of their houses and grounds by curious strangers and the public generally. In 1867, for example, a plaintiff invoked the law of nuisance to enjoin his neighbor from holding fetes attracting large crowds of people, some of whom sat on the walls of the plaintiff's grounds, "destroy[ing his] privacy."⁹² The lessor of a house on the Thames was granted compensation in 1872 for loss of privacy from the construction of a public road along the river bank.⁹³ The law of trespass was extended in the last decade of the century to cover "unreasonable" user of the highway adjoining the plaintiff's land,⁹⁴ an activity that encompassed observation of the plaintiff's activities on his own land.⁹⁵ The criminal law supplemented these remedies with longstanding prohibitions against peeping Toms and eavesdroppers⁹⁶ as well as against new offenses of "watching and besetting" aimed primarily at trade union picketers.⁹⁷

B. Confidential Communications

A second set of legal doctrines gave more sketchy protection to the privacy of letters, telegrams, and certain privileged conversations. One of these doctrines was grounded in the right of an author to forbid publication of manuscript works on grounds of "literary property."⁹⁸ When this legal protection was extended to the writers of personal letters seeking to enjoin their publication by the recipients or by third parties,⁹⁹ the grounds of property protection soon became a convenient fiction. In 1813, the decision of the Vice-Chancellor in Perceval v. Phipps¹⁰⁰ recognized that "correspondence between friends, or relations, upon their private concerns . . . , could be made public in a way, that must frequently be very injurious to the feelings of individuals," but expressed doubts that every private letter merited protection as a literary work. Lord Eldon, in his judgment in the 1818 case of Gee v. Pritchard,¹⁰¹ laid such doubts to rest by stating frankly that he did not forbid publication "because the letters are written in confidence, or because the publication of them may wound the feelings of the Plaintiff," but that he could do so on the ground of property in order to prevent such "mischievous effects."

The principle stated in a dissenting judgment in 1769 had become the rule, that "every man has a right to keep his own sentiments" and "a right to judge whether he will make them public, or commit them only to the sight of his friends."¹⁰² In the ultimate formulation of the doctrine, a writer of a letter retained a property right in the words, while giving only a property right in the paper and ink to the recipient.¹⁰³ By the beginning of the twentieth century the letter writer's property right was so easily identified with a privacy interest that one High Court judge, in upholding a 1905 judgment of 400 pounds against the publisher of a personal letter, admitted that "in cases of this kind the property in a thing like a letter may be mainly valuable because it gives the plaintiff the right to keep it private."¹⁰⁴ Disclosure of private letters would only be allowed if it was necessary to vindicate an important interest of the recipient.¹⁰⁵

"One instance," an eighteenth century tract pointed out, "of the legislature's regard to the privacy of papers and correspondence" was the enactment in 1710 of a criminal penalty for unauthorized opening of letters in the post office.¹⁰⁶ The nineteenth century courts stiffened the penalty by treating interception of letters in the mails as larceny.¹⁰⁷ Rumors of systematic letter opening by government agents alarmed the English public in the mid-nineteenth century,¹⁰⁸ though the subject did not come to the attention of the courts. An official inquiry revealed that the practice existed, but the issue of six or seven warrants annually was thought by the Select Committee of the Lords not to interfere with "the sanctity of private correspondence."¹⁰⁹ As a result of the public outcry, one of the secret offices conducting such work was disbanded and in the other one, specific warrants from the Secretary of State were henceforth required.¹¹⁰

Messages sent along telegraph wires, unlike letters in the mail, were necessarily read by the sending and receiving operators.¹¹¹ Post office regulations imposed confidentiality requirements on telegraphers,¹¹² as did statutes forbidding disclosure of the contents of any telegram.¹¹³ Subpoenas in civil suits ordering wholesale production of telegrams were refused in the 1870s on the basis that "the necessary confidence of a sender of a telegram in the Post Office should not be violated."¹¹⁴ Later in the century, this legal protection of telegraph messages from unofficial interception was carried over to the newly invented telephone.¹¹⁵ Official interception remained possible, however, on the basis of the Secretary of State's authority to open letters.

Evidentiary privileges safeguarded the confidentiality of all communications, by whatever means conducted, when they took place within certain specific relationships.¹¹⁶ For example, it had long been "undoubted law, that attorneys ought to keep inviolably the secrets of their clients."¹¹⁷ This privilege, extending to any matter "in its nature private" communicated to an attorney by his client,¹¹⁸ was explained by Vice Chancellor Knight Bruce as follows:¹¹⁹

[S]urely the meanness and mischief of prying into a man's confidential consultations with his legal advisor, the general evil of infusing reserve and dissimulation, uneasiness, and suspicion, and fear into those communications which must take place, and which, unless in a condition of perfect security, must take place uselessly or worse, are too great a price to pay for truth itself.

While the same legal protection did not extend to communications with doctors¹²⁰ or clergymen,¹²¹ courts did recognize the public's expectations of confidentiality from these professionals,¹²² and judges expressed unwillingness to extract secrets from them on the witness stand.¹²³

One other relationship attained a protected status in nineteenth century common law. For the first half of the century, husbands and wives were not considered competent witnesses to testify for or against each other, even in civil cases.¹²⁴ When statutes removed the absolute barrier to spousal testimony,¹²⁵ a privilege remained for communications made confidentially between husband and wife. This "social policy" to hold marital confidences "sacred"¹²⁷ was explained in an 1824 decision: "The happiness of the marriage state requires that the confidence between man and wife should be kept for ever inviolable."¹²⁸ Jeremy Bentham, who fulminated against all evidentiary barriers to truthfinding, reserved particular scorn for this protection,¹²⁹ but it was entrenched in the law.

In other contexts as well, nineteenth century courts sought to minimize their interference with "the private affairs of the people" and their "domestic life."¹³⁰ The doctrines of literary property in personal letters, sanctity of the mails, and evidentiary privilege, though variously grounded, combined to accord a limited protection for the communications deemed most deserving of confidentiality in the nineteenth century.

C. Personal Information

Nineteenth century English courts afforded only a precarious protection to intangible personal information but showed some of their greatest legal inventiveness when they did act to protect this privacy interest. As James Fitzjames Stephen wrote in 1873: "Privacy may be violated not only by the intrusion of a stranger, but by compelling or persuading a person to direct too much attention to his own feelings" and to "strip his soul stark naked for the inspection of any other."¹³¹ Personal secrets of past wrongdoing had long been protected from forced disclosure in court by the maxim nemo tenetur prodere seipsum.¹³² This privilege against self-incrimination, assured by statute since the seventeenth century,¹³³ also extended to revelations that would lead to civil forfeiture.¹³⁴ Judicial interpretations varied on the degree of likelihood of prosecution¹³⁵ and the subjective or objective determination of its gravity,¹³⁶ but the privilege remained secure. A related doctrine threw cases out of court when they needlessly introduced "indecent" evidence tending to injure a person's feelings.¹³⁷

With the onrushing complexity of nineteenth century industrial and commercial life, however, individuals gave up more and more sensitive personal information about themselves to governmental and private institutions.¹³⁸ The census, for example, widened its inquiry (and thus had to overcome fresh public opposition) with each passing decade.¹³⁹ Since customary local remedies against "gossiping" had long since vanished,¹⁴⁰ the legal ramifications of this loss of individual control had to be worked out anew by the courts. An Englishman's banker, it was held, might be forced to disclose his exact financial status in court upon a proper and necessary inquiry,¹⁴¹ but the bank¹⁴² and its employees¹⁴³ had a duty not to disclose such information to third parties.¹⁴⁴

Englishmen seeking damages for an offensive disclosure of personal details in print¹⁴⁵ would look first to their remedies in defamation. The difficulty with civil actions for libel and slander, however, was that the truth of the matter published had become a complete defense.¹⁴⁶ When the real cause of injury was an invasion of privacy, the truth of the matter disclosed was precisely its sting.¹⁴⁷ The little-used criminal libel prosecution, by contrast, had as its watchword "the greater the truth, the greater the libel."¹⁴⁸ Courts and juries sympathetic to privacy interests in civil libel actions could nevertheless look for inaccuracies of detail in an otherwise truthful account of the private character of a private individual¹⁴⁹ and could interpret disclosures of personal information as "comment" that was not "privileged."¹⁵⁰

When an invasion of privacy could be prevented or contained, a court of equity's order to enjoin the invasion offered a means of judicial protection much more satisfying than that of libel damages after the fact. Plaintiffs seeking such relief for the disclosure of personal information had to surmount Chancery's unwillingness to issue injunctions except in protection of property.¹⁵¹ The first assault on this jurisdictional barrier to effective privacy relief expanded the concept of property to include privacy interests. Judicial solicitude for the sensibilities of the Queen and her Prince Consort provided the occasion when a Mr. Strange offered the public a catalogue describing the amateur artistic efforts of the royal couple. In Albert v. Strange,¹⁵² the Solicitor General asked the court to find that the defendant had abstracted "one attribute of property, which was often its most valuable quality, namely, privacy,"¹⁵³ and Vice Chancellor Knight Bruce issued the injunction against what he called "sordid spying into the privacy of domestic life."¹⁵⁴ On appeal, Lord Chancellor Cottenham also said that privacy was the right invaded, though property was the basis of relief.¹⁵⁵ Chancery's rule limiting injunctions to protection of property led a later vice-chancellor to find property in land, goods, business, skill, and "even in a man's good name."¹⁵⁶

Toward the end of the century, Chancery's rule was circumvented in other ways to affirm privacy interests. In Pollard v. Photographic Co., an 1888 case, a woman whose photographic portrait was exhibited for sale by the photographer obtained an injunction on two grounds:

breach of an implied term in the photographer's contract and abuse of the confidence placed in him by his customer.¹⁵⁷ In the 1894 case of Monson v. Tussauds, Ltd., a man acquitted of murder succeeded in having an effigy of himself removed from a London waxwork exhibition on the basis of defamation.¹⁵⁸ Two of the judges in the latter case delivered denunciations of the practices of exhibitors and newspaper journalists in portraying truthful incidents of private life.¹⁵⁹ Unless some prior relationship of the parties or defamatory innuendo could be shown, however, publication of a person's likeness or description would not give rise to an injunction at the end of the nineteenth century.¹⁶⁰ The legal regime in place by 1900 -- piecemeal protection of acknowledged privacy interests through a variety of other legal doctrines -- was to remain largely unchanged in England until the second half of the twentieth century.¹⁶¹

IV. OTHER ROUTES TO RECOGNITION

A. Statutory Proposals

In 1961, thirty years after Percy Winfield had urged the courts to recognize a right to privacy,¹⁶² Gerald Dworkin remarked in the pages of the Modern Law Review that in default of judicial creativity, legislation was the only avenue open.¹⁶³ Thus began nearly two decades of Parliamentary temporizing and judicial buck-passing.¹⁶⁴ The first comprehensive legislative proposal on the subject, Lord Mancroft's Right of Privacy Bill, was introduced in the House of Lords in March of that year.¹⁶⁵ It provided a remedy against publication without consent of a plaintiff's personal affairs or conduct unless the defendant established one of a number of defenses, including "reasonable public interest" in the publication.¹⁶⁶ Though the newspapers bitterly fought the measure, focusing their attack on its "reasonable public interest" standard,¹⁶⁷ Lord Goddard (a former Chief Justice) and Lord Denning supported the bill,¹⁶⁸ and a strong majority of the Lords sent it on to a Second Reading.¹⁶⁹ The Lord Chancellor, however, thought the subject unsuitable for legislation,¹⁷⁰ and without the Government's support it died in Committee.¹⁷¹ It is worth remarking that in the debate on Lord Mancroft's bill, both Lord Denning and Lord Chancellor Kilmuir expressed their confidence that judicial recognition of an action for infringement of privacy was not far off.¹⁷²

The next flurry of legislative interest arose in 1967, sparked by Alexander Lyon's Right of Privacy Bill establishing an action against unreasonable and serious interference with the seclusion of an individual, his family, or his property, subject again to several defenses.¹⁷³ This proposal also drew heavy opposition from the press¹⁷⁴ and foundered for want of Government support.¹⁷⁵ Later that year, the Law Commission held a high-level seminar on privacy legislation but withdrew from the field in expectation of a parliamentary committee.¹⁷⁶ Also in 1967, following a conference of the International Commission of Jurists,¹⁷⁷ "Justice," the British section of that body, embarked on a long-term study of the privacy issue.¹⁷⁸ Succeeding years saw a number of bills introduced to deal with one or another aspect of privacy invasion,¹⁷⁹ all of them unsuccessful. Justice emerged with a draft bill in 1969,¹⁸⁰ and with slight changes this was put forward by Brian Walden as a Right of Privacy Bill in 1969.¹⁸¹

The Walden bill defined an inclusive "right of privacy" and a "right of action for infringement of privacy" subject as always to certain definite defenses.¹⁸² It attracted such wide support that, despite predictable press hostility,¹⁸³ the Home Secretary only averted a Second Reading by promising to set up a Government committee to consider legislation.¹⁸⁴ This Committee, chaired by Sir Kenneth Younger and charged to consider only non-governmental incursions on privacy,¹⁸⁵ labored for two years and made its report in 1972. The Committee members, with two dissents, came out against a general right to privacy.¹⁸⁶ The scheme of parliamentary enactment of comprehensive privacy legislation proposed by Dworkin in 1961 was discredited.¹⁸⁷ Even the Younger Committee's minor recommendations for new criminal offenses have not been enacted. The committee's suggestions for voluntary self-regulation, including an increased lay presence on the Press Council¹⁸⁸ and complaint procedures in the broadcasting authorities,¹⁸⁹ have had more effect, but comprehensive privacy legislation has not appeared likely since the 1972 report.¹⁹⁰ Issues of governmental intrusion on personal privacy, a matter beyond the scope of the Younger Committee's report, have since been drawn to Parliament's attention. When the question of official wiretapping was raised in 1979,¹⁹¹ a White Paper was prepared on the subject¹⁹² but the Government remained opposed to any legislation altering current practices.¹⁹³ Interest in proposed "freedom of information" legislation has sparked consideration of what privacy exceptions such enactments would require,¹⁹⁴ again with no tangible result as yet. Parliament has shown more willingness to consider codes of protection for personal information in public and private data banks, no doubt in response to pressure from other European nations.¹⁹⁵ Two reports in 1975¹⁹⁶ and one in 1978¹⁹⁷ have addressed the problem, recommending establishment of a permanent Data Protection Authority. In 1981, the Thatcher Government promised a bill to establish clear rules for collection of and access to computer records on individuals,¹⁹⁸ but it has not been forthcoming.

Although the drive for explicit and comprehensive privacy legislation has failed, Parliament did enact, in a piecemeal and incidental fashion, a number of privacy protections of limited scope. Unofficial mail-opening and disclosure of the contents of telegrams have long been offenses,¹⁹⁹ and it is possible to piece together statutory prohibitions against most methods of wiretapping and bugging.²⁰⁰ Many statutes, including the Official Secrets Act, make civil servants' disclosures of information obtained in confidence in the course of duty an offense.²⁰¹ Beginning in the 1920s, statutes have begun to exclude the press from court proceedings in divorce, wardship, and other highly sensitive matters.²⁰² Also by statute, fingerprints of arrested minors under the age of fourteen are not recorded, and fingerprint records of acquitted adult defendants are destroyed.²⁰³ The Copyright Act has added a remedy for false attribution of authorship,²⁰⁴ and television broadcasting authorities have been required to delete programs offensively representing any living person.²⁰⁵ More recently, Parliament has prohibited intrusive "harrassment" of tenants by landlords,²⁰⁶ of debtors by creditors,²⁰⁷ and of any person by means of obscene and menacing telephone calls²⁰⁸ and unsolicited obscene publications.²⁰⁹ In the mid-1970s major statutory protections have been the Consumer Credit Act of 1974 providing individuals with access and opportunities to correct credit information compiled on them,²¹⁰ the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act imposing criminal and civil penalties on disclosure of spent convictions,²¹¹ and the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act of 1976 securing the anonymity of rape victims and defendants.²¹² The parliamentary contribution remains small, however, and the legislative momentum appears to have been lost to the courts.²¹³

B. International Protection of Human Rights

British jurists, notably Sir Hersch Lauterpacht,²¹⁴ played an important role in the drafting and adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948.²¹⁵ Among the broad and ambiguous statements of principle in the Declaration, Article 12 provides: "No one shall be subjected to arbitrary interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence Everyone has the right to the protection of the law against such interference" ²¹⁶ Despite the Declaration's unanimous adoption, and despite subsequent resolutions calling upon states to "fully and faithfully observe" its provisions,²¹⁷ its status as a norm of international law has long been doubted.²¹⁸ Some enforcement apparatus was created by the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, opened for signature in 1966 and brought into force ten years later.²¹⁹ Article 17 of the Covenant repeats the Universal Declaration provision on privacy, adding the qualification that interference is only a violation if "unlawful" as well as arbitrary.²²⁰ Parties to the International Covenant, of which the United Kingdom is one, oblige themselves "to respect and to ensure to all individuals within its territory and subject to its jurisdiction" all of the rights enumerated and "to adopt such legislative or other measures as may be necessary to give effect" to them.²²¹ The British Government has denied, however, that any such legislation on its part is necessary, pointing to "safeguards of different kinds, operating in the various legal systems, independently of the Covenant but in full conformity to it."²²² Human rights agreements of world-wide scope have not provided any impetus for the recognition of a right to privacy in English law.²²³

By contrast, the European Convention on Human Rights of 1950 has shown much greater promise.²²⁴ Article 8(1) of the Convention states a general and unqualified right to privacy: "Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence."²²⁵ The Article goes on to provide that "[t]here shall be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right" and adds several qualifications:²²⁶ except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the right and freedoms of others.

The United Kingdom, as a signatory, is obliged to "secure to everyone within [its] jurisdiction" all the rights defined by the Convention,²²⁷ but the Government makes no specific undertaking to enact such rights or to give the Convention the force of law.²²⁸ In a report to the Secretary General of the Council of Europe, the British Government dealt with Article 8 by stating: "Any power a public authority may have to interfere with a person's right to respect for private and family life, his home and his correspondence must be provided by law."²²⁹ Current interpretation of Article 8 to provide a right against nongovernmental as well as governmental interferences²³⁰ renders such an answer inadequate and promises at least continued consideration of legal protection of privacy by the-English domestic courts.

It is standard constitutional doctrine in England that international treaties do not have the effect of domestic law,²³¹ and the European Convention is no exception to this doctrine.²³² Thus, the Convention provides no basis for bringing an action at law in England.²³³ At one time, the courts began to admonish government officials to "bear in mind" the Convention's principles²³⁴ including Article 8's right to respect for family life.²³⁵ Soon, however, the courts cut back on this application of the Convention, on the grounds that Article 8 was "so wide as to be incapable of practical application" to administrative practices.²³⁶ Though the English courts have interpreted other broadly drafted international conventions more flexibly and freely,²³⁷ the Convention's sweeping pronouncements are themselves considered incapable of judicial interpretation²³⁸ and only grudgingly adverted to as guides to the interpretation of domestic statutes.²³⁹ Like the official pronouncements of the Government to the Council of Europe, judicial decisions tend to assume that existing law adequately protects all the rights mentioned in the European convention.²⁴⁰

The European Convention does operate of its own force in actions brought directly in the European Court of Justice in Luxemburg.²⁴¹ Thus, in 1980 an English company brought before the European Court, albeit unsuccessfully, an action against European Commission inspectors for their surprise search of its office premises and records.²⁴² The jurisdictional ambit within which such suits can be brought is very limited.²⁴³ The United Kingdom has, in addition, signed the Optional Clause to the 1950 Convention giving its subjects the right to petition directly to the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg.²⁴⁴ Although this too provides a route for privacy protection,²⁴⁵ the administrative obstacles facing a petitioner are truly formidable.²⁴⁶ Even so, opportunities for adjudication of privacy claims under Article 8 of the Convention in these international tribunals may have the indirect effect of spurring the creation of domestic remedies to forestall unfavorable world publicity.²⁴⁷

International pressure of a different sort has recently been put on Britain to catch up with other European Community members in explicit protection of individual privacy. Western European nations with high levels of privacy protection for personal information contained in public and private computer data banks within their borders have threatened to refuse to allow transmission of such information to countries without such safeguards.²⁴⁸ In response, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development has formulated Guidelines on the Protection of Privacy and Transborder Flows of Personal Data,²⁴⁹ and the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe has adopted a Convention for the Protection of Individuals with Regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data.²⁵⁰ The Data Convention imposes restrictions on the gathering of personal information for automated processing and a right of individual access to automated files; signatories to the Data Convention could refuse to transmit information about an individual's race, politics, religion, sexual life, or criminal convictions to a country whose domestic law lacked "appropriate safeguards."²⁵¹ Britain signed the new convention in 1981²⁵² but has failed to implement it domestically; in the absence of legislation, this highly technical area provides little incentive for judicial innovation.

V. RECENT JUDICIAL INITIATIVES

A. Private Property

In the twentieth century, the Englishman's castle is not the potent symbol of individualism and self-reliance it had once been.²⁵³ The use of violence to ward off public and private invasions of the domestic castle has been closely circumscribed by codification of the criminal law of self-defense.²⁵⁴ At the same time, legislation has authorized many new penetrations of the family home by national and local authorities for various purposes: to check water and electricity usage, to monitor television licenses, and so forth.²⁵⁵ New restrictions on the individual owner's use of property have also multiplied with more crowded conditions and the increased role of the state.²⁵⁶ Nevertheless, the twentieth century has seen a great willingness on the part of the courts to recognize and protect an interest in privacy -- more recently denominated a fundamental right to privacy -- in a number of contexts.²⁵⁷

While landowners have continued to complain about overlooking by neighbors,²⁵⁸ the unwillingness of the nineteenth century courts to find implied covenants of privacy remained in force until the 1950s.²⁵⁹ Since then, the question has arisen in the Lands Tribunal under statutory authority to discharge or modify restrictive covenants.²⁶⁰ In that forum, objectors have frequently been able to keep covenants in force on the grounds that loss of privacy would result from the modification.²⁶¹ Moreover, court action has successfully challenged a public promenade that would overlook hitherto private estates.²⁶² The actions of the Lands Tribunal have in effect reversed the earlier judicial attitude of ignoring privacy interests, while at the same time the privacy of neighboring landowners has become a consideration guiding local authorities in their grants of planning permission.²⁶³

Intrusions by strangers falling short of physical trespass have twice failed to elicit injunctive relief from the English courts in the past decade. The claim of invasion of privacy was central to the plaintiff's argument in Bernstein v. Skyviews & General Ltd. in 1977.²⁶⁴ Lord Bernstein of Leigh brought an action for damages for trespass and injunctive relief when photographs of his country estate were taken by the defendants' airplane flying over his property.²⁶⁵ Mr. Justice Griffith found the single overflight to be neither a trespass nor a nuisance, though he recognized that "constant surveillance" of a plaintiff's house from above would be a "monstrous invasion of privacy" for which a court might well grant relief.²⁶⁶

The privacy claim was more incidental in the "cricket case," Miller v. Jackson, decided by the Court of Appeals in the same year.²⁶⁷

Landowners adjoining a playing field sought an injunction against the local cricket club when, season after season, a few long drives would invariably send cricket balls flying into their garden, threatening damage and necessitating retrieval by the players. Though damages would have been awarded on grounds of negligence and nuisance, the injunction was not issued because, as Lord Denning put it, the plaintiff's private interest "in securing the privacy of his home and garden" was outweighed by the public interest in preserving the institution of village cricket.²⁶⁸ Privacy has not found a place among actionable nuisances, at least when injunctive relief is sought.

Since 1921, the English courts have narrowly construed police powers of entry, search, and seizure in the interest of "the privacy of the Englishman's dwelling house."²⁶⁹ As Lord Denning announced in Ghani v. Jones in 1970, the requirement of reasonable grounds for searches and seizures was based on the principle that the individual's "privacy and his possessions are not to be invaded except for the most compelling reasons."²⁷⁰ Alongside the line of decisions following Ghani v. Jones,²⁷¹ another series of cases has invoked the privacy interest to forbid any official search whatever under statutes not explicitly allowing entry into homes.²⁷² As most recently stated, "Parliament should not be presumed to have authorized any greater invasion of privacy than was expressly sanctioned."²⁷³

Recent decisions in the House of Lords have developed each of these lines of authority with explicit reference to the right to privacy. In Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd.,²⁷⁴ although the judgment reversed a Court of Appeal decision holding a broad search of documents unlawful,²⁷⁵ Lords Wilberforce and Scarman in the majority and Lord Salmon in dissent all appealed to the citizen's "right to privacy," an important "human right" limiting the state's power of search into homes, offices, and papers.²⁷⁶ Morris v. Beardmore²⁷⁷ construed sections 8 and 9 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 to forbid intrusion into the home but to allow the trial judge discretion in excluding evidence so obtained. Lord Edmund-Davies, Lord Keith of Kinkel, Lord Scarman, and Lord Roskill all made mention of the right, Lord Scarman describing it as "fundamental" both in the common law and under the European Convention.²⁷⁸ In the Rossminster decision, moreover, the Law Lords explicitly charged the courts with enforcing this right to privacy against police searches.²⁷⁹

A new threat to the privacy of private property, the "Anton Piller" order,²⁸⁰ has made the surprise tactics of police search and seizure available to plaintiffs in civil suits, on a showing that evidence in a defendant's possession is likely to be destroyed if subpoenaed by regular means. The procedure traces its origin to Chancery's circumvention of the householder's protection in Semayne's Case.²⁸¹ Invasion of the defendant's privacy was a concern expressed in one of the first Anton Piller cases.²⁸² This concern has surfaced again in two 1980 decisions,²⁸³ one of them grounded explicitly on the "rights of privacy" and on the maxim that "an Englishman's home is his castle."²⁸⁴

B. Confidential Communication

The security of communications by letter, telegram, and telephone from official and unofficial interception remains a subject of concern in England.²⁸⁵ Although criminal prosecutions²⁸⁶ and damage actions²⁸⁷ have succeeded against detectives for unofficial acts of wiretapping, courts have held admissible evidence obtained by tapping and by other forms of electronic eavesdropping.²⁸⁸ In the 1979 Malone decision, Vice Chancellor Megarry rejected a challenge to police wiretapping based on an asserted right to privacy,²⁸⁹ but he held out the possibility of judicial recognition of such a right against unofficial interception.²⁹⁰ Megarry's opinion also suggested that future scrutiny of England's official wiretapping practices may well proceed under the European Convention.²⁹¹

Evidentiary privileges²⁹² have been supplemented by new legal protections for communications made in judicial proceedings. Court-ordered discovery creates obligations of confidentiality on the basis of a "public interest in preserving privacy," announced by Lord Denning in Riddick v. Thames Board Mills, a 1977 decision.²⁹³ This principle has prevented the use of discovered information in other suits against the party making discovery²⁹⁴ and has provided limitations on the scope of discovery.²⁹⁵ Most recently, in Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Department,²⁹⁶ the House of Lords upheld a Court of Appeal decision in which Lord Denning elevated the "public interest" of the Riddick case to "one of our fundamental human rights" and Lord Justice Templeman joined him in an appeal to this "right to privacy."²⁹⁷ Discovery, said Lord Blank, "involves invasion of an otherwise absolute right to privacy," but neither this supposed right nor a "right to freedom of information" could be rigidly applied in this area.²⁹⁸ Just as communications between client and attorney earned legal protection because of their central importance to the conduct of litigation, documents made available to the opposing party in litigation now bear strict safeguards formulated explicitly in privacy terms.

Two attempts in the mid-1970s to restrain the publication of matters disclosed in the privacy of wardship proceedings failed to win over the Court of Appeal,²⁹⁹ although one of them did provoke Lord Denning to express the need for a "general remedy for infringement of privacy."³⁰⁰ Suits for breach of confidence, relying on Albert v. Strange³⁰¹ and the trade secret cases,³⁰² have met with more success in preventing public disclosure of communications made confidentially. A pair of cases on public relations employees disclosing information about their principals in breach of confidence show the close relation of this new action³⁰³ to privacy interests. In one case, the injunction was refused on the ground that the publicity-seeking plaintiffs "were in no position to complain of an invasion of their privacy" by the defendants' disclosures.³⁰⁴ In the other decision, that "fundamental human right," the "right of privacy," outweighed the right of the press to keep the public informed, and the injunction issued.³⁰⁵

The action for breach of confidence extends to intimate details of domestic affairs as well as commercial secrets.³⁰⁶ It prevents disclosure not only by those in whom the confidence has been reposed but also by third parties who acquire the sensitive information.³⁰⁷ In the twentieth century counterpart to Albert v. Strange, the Duke of Argyll was restrained from publishing details of his divorce proceeding, including his estranged wife's private diary.³⁰⁸ Justice

Ungoed-Thomas, in issuing the injunction, quoted Lord Cottenham's 1849 pronouncement that "privacy is the right invaded."³⁰⁹ Argyll v. Argyll sums up the legal protection of confidential communications in England: the property interest of the writer in sentiments confided to paper, the implied bond of confidentiality in the marital relationship, the limitations on testimony and documents discovered in judicial proceedings, and the privacy interest at the heart of the action of breach of confidence.

C. Personal Information

Collection, storage, and use of sensitive personal information in public and private organizations has accelerated in twentieth century England,³¹⁰ and with it has increased the level of privacy concerns reaching the courts. As government's information demands have multiplied, fears of gossip by local enumerators³¹¹ have given way to court challenges directed against the entire regime of data collection.³¹² The potential for unauthorized access to recorded information about individuals was highlighted in Director of Public Prosecutions v. Withers, an unsuccessful prosecution of a detective agency for "conspiracy . . . to invade privacy" by impersonating bank officers to obtain confidential financial reports.³¹³ More recently, again in the name of privacy, courts have protected bank records from government "fishing expeditions" of various kinds.³¹⁴ But the impact of the courts on public and private recordkeeping practices has on the whole been negligible.³¹⁵

English courts have made more of an effort to minimize the intrusions on privacy caused by their own proceedings, thus adding to the small arsenal of legal protections for personal information. For example, a strong showing of necessity must be made to justify invasions of a party's privacy by medical examinations,³¹⁶ body searches,³¹⁷ and blood tests.³¹⁸ Litigants are also given some protection through requirements of confidentiality in wardship³¹⁹ and divorce cases,³²⁰ as well as for documents disclosed in discovery.³²¹ Moreover, in a number of recent cases, courts have acted to prevent disclosure of the private affairs of non-parties. On grounds of privacy protection, courts have refused to compel the parents of divorcing spouses to disclose the testamentary provisions they have made³²² and have refused to order disclosure of confidential employee records in employment discrimination suits.³²³ Likewise, they have sought to prevent "jury vetting," the collection of official record information about members of jury panels by prosecution and defense lawyers, again in the name of the jurymen's "right of privacy."³²⁴ Most recently, the Court of Appeals has applied the "individual's right to privacy" in limiting statutory powers to inspect individual bank accounts of nonparties for litigation purposes.³²⁵

Having put its own house in order, the English judiciary remains reluctant to enforce broad privacy protections against the press. The House of Lords rejected an explicit privacy remedy against the press in Tolley v. Fry,³²⁶ and since that decision actions for damages on the explicit ground of privacy have not been successful,³²⁷ although the courts have on occasion upheld awards of damages for the publication of truthful information about private persons and of photographs.³²⁸ There remains hope, however, for judicial creativity in this area as well. In the 1980 case of British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd.,³²⁹ Lord Denning assumed the availability of a privacy tort against the excesses of irresponsible "investigative journalism":³³⁰

[T]he plaintiff has his remedy in damages against the newspaper -- or sometimes an injunction; and that should suffice. It may be for libel. It may be for breach of copyright. It may be for infringement of privacy. The courts will always be ready to grant an injunction to restrain a publication which is an infringement of privacy.

Led by Lord Denning, the English courts from highest to lowest have expressed in recent years a willingness to speak of the right to privacy, and in the appropriate case to give it force, even when this nascent right comes into conflict with existing rights to free expression and the vested interest of a powerful press.

VI. ANALYTICAL AND COMPARATIVE OVERVIEW

A. The Scope of the Right

How far have the English courts taken their fledgling right to privacy? In a dozen or so reported decisions, all within the last three years, English judges have explicitly invoked such a right, though without indicating any intention of creating a new legal right of action in .³³¹ The House of Lords has made three such pronouncements. First, through the power of the courts to hold searches and seizures unlawful, the right to privacy prevents abuses of statutory powers of search by government officers.³³² Second, as a tool of statutory construction, the right forbids government officers to force their way into private homes without explicit authorization of an Act of Parliament and further gives judicial discretion (at least in some circumstances) to exclude evidence obtained in an unauthorized entry.³³³ Third, in the context of civil litigation, the right limits a party's use of documents obtained through discovery, making wider disclosure of such documents a contempt of court.³³⁴ In the Court of Appeal, the right to privacy has grounded even more restrictive constructions of statutory powers of search,³³⁵ as well as injunctions against the publication of information obtained in confidence,³³⁶ and refusals by the court itself to assist litigants in obtaining criminal records of jury members³³⁷ and bank records of other nonparties.³³⁸ In the Chancery Division, the right has occasioned refusal to order surprise searches of defendants' premises in civil cases,³³⁹ and in the Queen's Bench Division it has struck down police regulations on body searches of arrested persons.³⁴⁰ Finally, in dicta of the Court of Appeal quoted with approval in the House of Lords, some English judges have assumed the existence of a remedy for infringement of privacy by publication of confidential information.³⁴¹ This judicial recognition of a right to privacy in a broad range of contexts, the culmination of a decade or more of decisions focusing explicitly on privacy interests,³⁴² delineates the present scope of a healthy, exuberant new branch of English common law. Privacy law, no longer the piecemeal and incidental by-product of other doctrines, has finally come into its own.

Needless to say, the Englishman's right to privacy is not absolute.³⁴³ It remains in conflict with other rights, values, and interests. The cases recognizing the right show this inherent tension. One countervailing consideration is "the interest which the public has in preventing evasions of the law,"³⁴⁴ phrased more particularly in these cases as "the public interest in the detection and punishment of tax frauds"³⁴⁵ and "its desire to stamp out drunken driving."³⁴⁶ Another interest limiting privacy in civil litigation is "the public interest in discovering the truth so that justice may be done between the parties."³⁴⁷ Finally, there is of course the "freedom of expression" embodied in "the right of the press to inform the public, and the corresponding right of the public to be properly informed."³⁴⁸ It is in conflict with this lattermost right, the robust freedom of the English press, that the right to privacy shows its true vigor and promise. Its victories over interests in effective law enforcement and in the courtroom search for truth would not be nearly so impressive if the right to privacy did not also prevail occasionally over the well-guarded liberty of the press.³⁴⁹

On first sight, the litigants who have won for the Englishman his right to privacy appear to be an unlikely assortment of characters. Just as the principal beneficiaries of an explicit right to privacy in the nineteenth century were the royal family,³⁵⁰ it would seem fair to say that the rights most often vindicated by the recent cases have been those of limited companies and governmental entities. An international drug company,³⁵¹ a nationalized industry,³⁵² and the Home Office³⁵³ have joined the householder,³⁵⁴ the individual shopkeeper,³⁵⁵ and the disorderly conduct defendant³⁵⁶ as successful contenders for a right to privacy. Perhaps these vast institutions could better absorb the legal costs for what must have appeared at the outset of their cases an almost hopeless line of argument. Perhaps the courts have simply seized upon the first cases to come before them in which the right could be recognized. The language of all the decisions, at any rate, consistently treats privacy as a "human" right, one belonging to the "individual." Thus, in a case involving the search of a company's offices, Lords Wilberforce, Scarman, and Salmon were all careful to invoke the individual citizen's right to privacy in his own home, an important and basic human right.³⁵⁷ Despite the character of the litigants so far successful in asserting this right in the courts, it is evident that the English judiciary are keeping the central focus of the nascent right to privacy on the individual Englishman, his home, and his private life.

B. Sources of the Right

What influence has the American right to privacy had on its English counterpart? American privacy cases are discussed only rarely in the opinions, when counsel are willing to cite them and judges to consider them. Vice Chancellor Megarry, for instance, gave extensive consideration to leading American cases on wiretapping in his rejection of a privacy argument in the Malone decision.³⁵⁸ Lord Denning, in his Court of Appeal decision in British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd.,³⁵⁹ brought many American decisions on privacy and the press to the attention of the House of Lords. The Law Lords had earlier adopted the privacy language of a New Jersey case on the legality of compulsory blood testing.³⁶⁰ Most recently, in the 1982 Harman decision, Lord Scarman referred to American cases balancing the confidentiality of discovered documents and the freedom of the press.³⁶¹ By and large, however, the American law of privacy informs the English debate only indirectly, as a background presence not fully understood in detail but felt nevertheless to lend some credibility to claims of legal protection for privacy in England.

Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights³⁶² has likewise played only an indirect role in the formulation of an English right to privacy. In the Malone decision, Megarry weighed and rejected an argument from the European Convention.³⁶³ Lord Denning, on the other hand, referred to Article 8 of the Convention in Schering Chemicals Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., in support of the contention that the right to privacy is a "fundamental human right,"³⁶⁴ as did Lord Scarman in Morris v. Beardmore.³⁶⁵ Terming a right "fundamental," Scarman admitted, "has an unfamiliar ring in the ears of common lawyers,"³⁶⁶ but the language of fundamental human rights is frequently encountered in recent English decisions on privacy. The European Convention is a background force, an international legal norm of uncertain weight and uncertain scope. Its promise of an external forum for privacy claims rejected by the English courts³⁶⁷ does, however, provide an extra spur to recognition of the new right that the American example can never supply.

Ultimately, as Lord Scarman noted in the 1982 Harman decision, "neither American law nor the European Convention can be decisive . . . , but both are powerfully persuasive -- the Convention because its observance is an obligation of the United Kingdom, and American law because of its common law character" -- yet each of these sources, he added, "reinforces conclusions which we draw independently from our own legal principles."³⁶⁸ The common law of England has itself given birth to the right to privacy. Authority for limiting the intrusions of the state has been found in the strongly-worded judgments of the Court of Common Pleas in the eighteenth century cases striking down general search warrants, principally Entick v. Carrington.³⁶⁹ Authority for limiting the inroads of the press and other unofficial intruders has been found in Albert v. Strange.³⁷⁰ When neither of these precedents seems appropriate, the courts are thrown back on the still vigorous maxim "an Englishman's house is his castle."³⁷¹ All this is not to say that the right must have some constitutional force of its own. In all the recent cases applying a right to privacy, English judges have not been embarrassed by the constitutional difficulties encountered by proponents of a Bill of Rights. Their privacy protections extend to civil actions, limitations on their own court procedures, and construction of statutes, but not to abrogation of statutes altogether. Even so, members of the House of Lords have had considerable experience with constitutional rights to privacy. In their role as judges of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the Law Lords have on many occasions had to interpret written constitutions of commonwealth members guaranteeing a right to privacy.³⁷² The English courts, as comparative latecomers to privacy law, have an abundance of sources upon which to draw.

B. Privacy in Other English-Language Jurisdictions

A quick review of the extent of privacy protection in other English-speaking countries will show that England's recognition of a right to privacy has, by comparison, come very late indeed. Scottish decisions since the nineteenth century have gone beyond the English cases toward recognizing an explicit right of action for invasions of privacy.³⁷³ In addition to warrantless searches³⁷⁴ and the activities of peeping Toms,³⁷⁵ police surveillance of a dwelling-house without probable cause has been considered to give rise to a cause of action.³⁷⁶ Scottish courts based their refusal to allow publication of private letters on the grounds of injury to reputation and to feelings rather than on the property grounds maintained by English courts³⁷⁷ and awarded damages for breach of an "obligation to secrecy" against a doctor who divulged intimate medical information.³⁷⁸ Scottish law carried privacy protection furthest in opposition to press intrusions, settling by the mid-nineteenth century that damages could be awarded for publications of truthful information about "some old and generally forgotten immoral act or act of impropriety"³⁷⁹ or "some physical deformity or secret defect."³⁸⁰ Personal ridicule was only allowed, according to one Scottish judge, "so long as the privacy of domestic life is not invaded."³⁸¹ In a 1916 decision of the House of Lords interpreting Scottish law, Lord Chancellor Haldane invoked "the right of a private individual to have his character respected" and reminded the press that "people should not as private persons be exposed to unjustifiable and arbitrary comment."³⁸² These cases proceed on the broad principle of the actio injuriarum, which affords remedies for affronts to reputation, honor, and feelings.³⁸³ Privacy has fit well within this scheme of values in Scottish law.

In Canada, experimentation with privacy remedies at the provincial level has led to growing acceptance of a right to privacy nationwide.³⁸⁴ Quebec has extended its version of the civil law actio injuriarum to invasions of privacy³⁸⁵ and Ontario³⁸⁶ and Alberta³⁸⁷ have allowed damage actions and injunctive relief based on a right to privacy. Three provinces, British Columbia,³⁸⁸ Manitoba³⁸⁹ and Saskatchewan³⁹⁰ have enacted statutes making willful violation of privacy a tort. Under these statutes, the Canadian courts have begun to work out the scope of the new statutory right.³⁹¹ The federal legislature has made wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping criminal offenses under a 1973 Protection of Privacy Act.³⁹² The federal statute applies to official interceptions, rendering them unlawful and inadmissible in evidence unless specifically authorized by a judge applying very narrow criteria of overriding public interest.³⁹³ The Act further provides that punitive damages may be awarded to the victim of an unlawful interception.³⁹⁴ As one recent commentator has concluded, "Although many provinces lack general privacy legislation, the combined effect of the extant common law, and provincial and federal legislation, grants Canadians a fair measure" of privacy protection, "perhaps as great as the United States" where the common law right to privacy originated.³⁹⁵

The Australian High Court rejected a right to privacy in 1937. The decision in Victoria Park Racing & Recreation Grounds Co. Ltd. v. Taylor refused relief to a racetrack owner whose races were being watched, reported, and broadcast to the public from a platform on the neighboring defendant's land.³⁹⁶ Prior to this decision, Australian courts had indirectly come closer to privacy protection than their English counterparts, by providing that truthful publications could be found defamatory if they were not for the "public benefit."³⁹⁷ Since 1937, Australian courts have given recognition to privacy interests against peeping Toms,³⁹⁸ eavesdroppers,³⁹⁹ and wiretappers,⁴⁰⁰ but most of the recent developments have been on the legislative front. In the past three years, the Australian Law Reform Commission has pressed forward with proposals for statutory rights of action for invasions of privacy by publication of "sensitive private facts" concerning the plaintiff,⁴⁰¹ by intrusion into or secret surveillance of a plaintiff's home,⁴⁰² and by breach of privacy safeguards in personal information systems.⁴⁰³ Some states have already enacted privacy protections,⁴⁰⁴ but much will depend upon the vigor with which the Australian Law Reform Commission pursues its mission.⁴⁰⁵

Among other commonwealth and common-law jurisdictions, South Africa was early to recognize a right to privacy.⁴⁰⁶ Like Scotland, it had long interpreted its actio injuriarum to remedy, for example, shadowing of the plaintiff by a private detective.⁴⁰⁷ Several cases in the 1950s, all involving photographs of the plaintiffs published to accompany newspaper gossip-column material, held that invasions of "the right of the plaintiff to personal privacy" constituted an injuria.⁴⁰⁸ English judges in British India gained familiarity with a "customary right of privacy" necessitated by religious rules about the seclusion of women.⁴⁰⁹ More recently, the Supreme Court of India, with a nod to the American case of Griswold v. Connecticut,⁴¹⁰ has held that "the right to personal liberty, the right to move freely throughout the territory of India and the freedom of speech create an independent right to privacy as an emanation from them," though this right found in their "penumbral zones" is subject to restrictions in the public interest."⁴¹¹ Finally, judges in the Sudan, another inheritor of the English common law, have recently held that "since privacy is as important to protect as peoples [sic] other property in the light of the zeitgeist there is nothing as a matter of principle to hinder us from receiving the American concept as to the invasion of privacy."⁴¹² So forthright a judicial recognition could hardly be expected from the English courts, but the comparison once again is instructive.

VI. CONCLUSION

In the latter half of the nineteenth century, tort law came into its own as a doctrinal category of the common law. It was the synthesis of a number of disparate actions, with a general principle of negligence informing most of its applications. This development of tort law has since been explained as the necessary response of the legal system to threats to life, limb, and property brought on by the mechanical inventions of the industrial revolution. Of course, developments in the realm of legal thought also played a part in the emergence of a general theory of tort law. Once the subject had come into being through a conjunction of material forces, human motives, and legal ideas, it took on a life of its own, working a powerful transformation on the ways the law is conceived, taught, and practiced.

Privacy law is a new doctrinal category in the making. In England and elsewhere, it is coming to be perceived as a unified body of rules determining the boundaries we may rely upon to keep out an intrusive world. Privacy law recognizes that ours is not a world of hermits. Much privacy is freely waived, and much is traded for benefits of other kinds. Nevertheless, some privacy is retained by those who do not thrust themselves into the public eye, and courts are more and more willing to recognize that that retained minimum of personal privacy gives rise to legal obligations on the part of those who would intrude upon it.

Like the law of torts, privacy law has arisen in part as a response to new inventions and modes of organization. If tort law was the product of the industrial revolution, privacy is the result of a communications and information revolution. Photography, microphones, telephones, and computers have all increased our vulnerability to unwanted intrusion without erasing our expectations of privacy, confidentiality, and security. Legislative proposals in England and legislation elsewhere have tended to focus on the new machines themselves, while the courts, viewing problems on a case-by-case basis, have reminded us of the human motives giving rise to privacy invasion and privacy protection. These motives do not seem to have changed very much as new ways of creating, transmitting, and storing information have replaced the handwritten letter and the manila file folder.

New legal ideas also contribute to the growing importance of privacy in the courts. The language of human rights permeates legal discourse from the international level to the confines of the family. Everybody has rights, and privacy is one of the fundamental human rights gaining widespread acceptance. Critics of the right to privacy point out its "newness," but as this Paper has shown, the common law roots of the right run deep in the realms of private property and confidential communications. By recognizing a unified law of privacy, the courts can gradually develop and define the newly-important boundaries around the private life in these realms and the realm of personal information. The requirement of a search warrant can be rendered more effective if the police are not permitted to join peeping Toms at the window sill. The exclusion of marital confidences in testimony can be extended to a privilege against their disclosure through eavesdroppers and intercepted letters. The action for breach of confidence can be made strengthened by establishing that the press, in publishing such confidences, is not completely immune to restraint. The right to privacy, now a fixture of English law, will prove fruitful for decades to come.

NOTES

¹An opinion survey ranking privacy concerns most important among "social issues" (including race and sex discrimination, free speech and free press) was conducted in 1971 for the Younger Committee. See REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PRIVACY app. E, at 230 (Cmd. 5012, 1972) (Sir Kenneth Younger, Chairman) [hereinafter cited as YOUNGER COMMITTEE]. For more impressionistic accounts from the past, see, e.g., J. GLOAG, THE ENGLISHMAN'S CASTLE 4 (1944); Aide, English Criticism of American Society, 8 OUR DAY 94, 101 (1891); Cobbe, The Love of Notoriety, 8 FORUM 170, 174-75 (1889); Thomas, An Englishman's Castle, 4 HOUSEHOLD WORDS 321, 323 (1851); The English, the Scots, and the Irish, EUR. REV., Oct. 1824, at 63. One social historian has identified the 17th and 18th centuries as the period of greatest advance in privacy interests at all levels of society. See L. STONE, THE FAMILY, SEX, AND MARRIAGE IN ENGLAND, 1500 - 1800 at 253-57, 395 (1977). See also A. Westin, Privacy in Western History 153 (May 1965) (unpublished Ph.D. dissertation on file at Harvard University Archives) (social origins of 17th century legal developments).

²See, e.g., Malone v. Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (No. 2), [1979] Ch. 344, 357, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, 644, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700, 712 (Ch. 1979) (opinion of Sir Robert Megarry, V.C.) (citing 8 HALSBURY'S LAWS OF ENGLAND para. 843 at 557 (4th ed. 1974)); Re X (a minor), [1975] Fam. 47, 58, [1975] 1 All E.R. 697, 704, [1975] 2 W.L.R. 335, 343 (C.A. 1974) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.) ("We have as yet no general remedy for infringement of privacy"); YOUNGER COMMITTEE, supra note 1, at para. 83; J. CLERK & W. LINDSELL, TORTS 1-48 (15 ed. 1982); J. SALMOND & R. HEUSTON, THE LAW OF TORTS 31 (R. Heuston & R. Chambers 14 ed. 1981).

³See, e.g., Developments in the Law -- The Interpretation of State Constitutional Rights, 95 HARV. L. REV. 1324, 1430-44 (1982) (ambit of privacy protection in state courts); pages 7-8 infra.

⁴See, e.g., E. CAMPBELL & H. WHITMORE, FREEDOM IN AUSTRALIA 372-75 (2d ed. 1973); J. FLEMING, THE LAW OF TORTS 590-96 (5th ed. 1977); pages 51-52 infra.

⁵See, e.g., ASPECTS OF PRIVACY LAW (D. Gibson ed. 1980); Burns, Law and Privacy: The Canadian Experience, 54 CAN. B. REV. 1 (1976); page 51 infra.

⁶Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted Dec. 10, 1948, G.A. Res. 217A, 3 U.N. GAOR, c. 3 Annexes (Agenda Item 58) 535, 536-41, U.N. Doc. A/811 at 71 (1948) [hereinafter cited as Universal Declaration]. Article 12 provides: "No one shall be subjected to arbitrary interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence" See page 29 infra.

⁷International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, adopted Dec. 16, 1966, entered into force Mar. 23, 1976, G.A. Res. 2200A, 21 U.N. GAOR, Supp. (No. 16) 52, U.N. Doc. A/6316 (1966) [hereinafter cited as International Covenant]. Article 17 substantially repeats article 12 of the Universal Declaration, supra note 6. See pages 29-30 infra.

⁸European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, Nov. 4, 1950, 213 U.N.T.S. 221, Cmd. 8969 (1953) [hereinafter cited as European Convention]. Article 8(1) provides: "Everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence." See pages 30-32, 47-48 infra.

⁹See, e.g., Right of Privacy Bill, 1961, introduced, 228 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 716 (1961); Right of Privacy Bill, 1967, introduced, 740 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 1565 (1967); Right of Privacy Bill, 1969, introduced, 787 id. at 1519 (1969); pages 25-26 infra.

¹⁰See, e.g., Griswold v. Connecticut, 381 U.S. 479 (1965)

(recognizing a "penumbral" constitutional right to privacy); Pavesich v. New England Life Ins. Co., 122 Ga. 190, 50 S.E. 68 (1905) (recognizing a common law right to privacy in tort).

¹¹See, e.g., Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982]

1 All E.R. 532, ___, ___, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338, ___, ___ (H.L.) (opinions of Lord Roskill, & of Lord Scarman dissenting), dismissing appeal from Home Office v. Harman, [1981] Q.B. 534, 557, 558, [1981] 2 All E.R. 349, 363, 364, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 310, 328, 329-30 (C.A.) (opinions of Lord Denning, M.R., & Templeman, L.J.); Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, 462, 464-65, 465, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, 762, 763, 764, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283, 294, 296-97, 298 (1980) (opinions of Lord Keith, Lord Scarman, & Lord Roskill); Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd., [1980] A.C. 952, 997, 1019, 1022, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, 82, 99, 101, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1, 36, 56, 59 (1979) (opinions of Lord Wilberforce & Lord Scarman, & of Lord Salmon, dissenting); R. v. Grossman, 73 Crim. App. 302, 308, 309 (C.A. 1981) (opinions of Shaw & Oliver, L.J.J.); Schering Chems. Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., [1981] 2 All E.R. 321, 333, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 848, 864 (C.A.) (Lord Denning, M.R., dissenting in part); R. v. Thornley, 72 Crim. App. 302, 306 (C.A. 1980) (opinion of Dunn, L.J.); R. v. Crown Court at Sheffield, ex parte Brownlow, [1980] Q.B. 530, 542, [1980] 2 All E.R. 444, 453, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 892, 900 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.); R. v. Adams, [1980] 1 Q.B. 575, 579-80, 583, [1980] 1 All E.R. 473, 478-79, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 275, 279 (C.A. 1979) (opinion of Cumming-Bruce, L.J.); Thermax Ltd. v. Schott Indus. Glass Ltd., 7 Fleet St. 289, 298 (Ch. 1980) (opinion of Browne-Wilkinson, J.); Lindley v. Rutter, [1981] Q.B. 128, 134, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 660 (1980) (opinion of Donaldson, L.J.). See also R. v. Withers, Times, June 17, 1971, at 1, col. 2 (Cent. Crim. Ct., June 16, 1971) (opinion of Roskill, J.). See generally pages 34-43 infra.

¹²Warren & Brandeis, The Right to Privacy, 4 HARV. L. REV. 193 (1890).

¹³See Note, The Right to Privacy in Nineteenth Century America, 94 HARV. L. REV. 1892 (1981).

¹⁴See id. at 1895-909.

¹⁵See id. at 1893, 1909-10; Warren & Brandeis, supra note 12, at 196, 206, 213.

¹⁶See Falconbridge, Desirable Changes in the Common Law, 5 CAN. B. REV. 581, 602-05 (1927) (proposing a common law "right to privacy" protecting one's "face, personal appearance, sayings, acts and personal relations" subject to some reservation in favor of the public interest).

¹⁷See The Unauthorised Use of Portraits, 3 AUSTR. L.J. 359, 359 (1930) (suggesting for Tolley v. J.S. Fry & Sons, Ltd. a remedy "against persons or corporations who, without authority, make use of another's name or portrait for advertising purposes").

¹⁸See Winfield, Privacy, 47 LAW Q. REV. 23 (1931). The lack of a legal remedy for press invasions of privacy had been noted in lay periodicals. See, e.g., Ervine, The Invasion of Privacy, 138 SPECTATOR 937 (1927).

¹⁹In the Court of Appeals, Tolley v. J.S. Fry & Sons, Ltd., [1930] 1 K.B. 467, 478, Lord Justice Greer announced his regret at having to overturn the jury award of damages, adding that "the defendants in publishing the advertisement in question, without first obtaining Mr. Tolley's consent, acted in a manner inconsistent with the decencies of life, and in so doing they were guilty of an act for which there ought to be a legal remedy."

²⁰[1931] A.C. 333.

²¹ See, e.g., Dworkin, Privacy and the Press, 24 MOD. L. REV. 185, 188-89 (1961); Yang, Privacy: A Comparative Study of English and American Law, 15 INT'L & COMP. L.Q. 175, 188 (1966); page 25 infra.

²² See, e.g., Press Council, Policy Statement on Privacy, quoted in Times, Apr. 12, 1976, at 4, col. 1 ("[A]ny attempt to legislate on privacy would be contrary to the public interest."); pages 25-26 infra.

²³ See, e.g., Neill, The Protection of Privacy, 25 MOD. L. REV. 393 (1962); Wacks, The Poverty of "Privacy", 96 LAW Q. REV. 73 (1980).

²⁴ See cases cited supra note 10; pages 34-43 infra.

²⁵ T. COOLEY, LAW OF TORTS 29 (2d ed. 1888).

²⁶ Warren & Brandeis, supra note 12, at 205.

²⁷ Id. at 213.

²⁸ Id. at 214-18.

²⁹ Godkin, The Rights of the Citizen. IV. -- To His Own Reputation, 8 SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE 58, 65 (1890). Warren and Brandeis did quote in passing a similar notion expressed in an English decision of 1769: "[E]very man has a right to keep his own sentiments" and "a right to judge whether he will make them public, or commit them only to the sight of his friends" Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2303, 2379, 98 Eng. Rep. 201, 242 (K.B. 1769) (Yates, J., dissenting).

³⁰ See A. WESTIN, PRIVACY AND FREEDOM 7 (1967) ("Privacy is the claim of individuals, groups, or institutions to determine for themselves when, how, and to what extent information about them is communicated to others.").

³¹ See pages 9-11 infra.

³² See Winfield, supra note 18, at 24.

³³ See Neill, supra note 23, at 396-97.

³⁴ See International Commission of Jurists, Conclusions of the Nordic Conference on the Right to Privacy 2-3 (1967), quoted in The Legal Protection of Privacy: A Comparative Study, 24 INT'L SOC. SCI. J. 417, 420 (1972).

³⁵For the earliest critiques appearing in American (and Australian) periodicals, see, e.g., Davis, What Do We Mean by "Right to Privacy"?, 4 S.D.L. REV. 1 (1959); Dworkin, The Common Law Protection of Privacy, 2 U. TASM. L. REV. 418 (1967); Kalven, Privacy in Tort Law -- Were Warren and Brandeis Wrong?, 31 LAW & CONTEMP. PROBS. 326 (1966).

³⁶Compare 229 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 625-30 (1961) (remarks of Lord Chancellor Kilmuir) (definitional difficulties of the Right of Privacy Bill) with Winfield, supra note 18; Paton, Broadcasting and Privacy, 16 CAN. B. REV. 425, 437 (1938); and Privacy and the Law, 228 LAW TIMES 233 (1959) (discussions relatively innocent of definitional considerations).

³⁷See YOUNGER COMMITTEE, supra note 1.

³⁸Id. at para. 658.

³⁹MacCormick, Privacy: A Problem of Definition?, 1 BRIT. J. L. & SOC'Y 75 (1974). See also Baxter, Privacy in Context: Principles Lost or Found?, 1977 CAMBRIAN L. REV. 7, 9 ("[I]t is not a definition which is needed but a general right, since otherwise the ingenuity of the modern invader of privacy cannot be taken into account [A] definition in the comprehensive sense is neither possible nor necessary.").

Another basis for the majority's conclusion was that Parliamentary legislation "has not been the way in which English law in recent centuries has sought to protect the main democratic rights of citizens," in particular, the rights of free speech and assembly. Professor MacCormick took issue with the Committee on its analogy between "liberties" such as free speech and the "claim-right" of privacy, concepts differentiated by Wesley Hohfeld's analytical categories.

MacCormick, A Note upon Privacy, 89 LAW Q. REV. 23 (1973). MacCormick's attack drew a reply from minority member Norman Marsh, saying essentially that the Committee knew what they were doing. Marsh, Hohfeld and Privacy, 89 LAW Q. REV. 183 (1973).

⁴⁰See Gavison, Privacy and the Limits of Law, 89 YALE L.J. 421 (1980); Benn, The Protection and Limitation of Privacy (pts. 1 & 2), 52 AUSTL. L.J. 601, 686 (1978).

⁴¹See, e.g., H.L.A. HART, THE CONCEPT OF LAW 124-25 (1961) (open texture of rules); W. TWINING & D. MIERS, HOW TO DO THINGS WITH RULES 110-111 (1976) (same).

⁴²See Wacks, supra note 23.

⁴³Id. at 74.

⁴⁴Id. at 75-77.

⁴⁵Id. at 79-81.

⁴⁶Id. at 83-86.

⁴⁷Id. at 81-83.

⁴⁸Id. at 86-87.

⁴⁹Id. at 88-89.

⁵⁰See, e.g., W. PRATT, PRIVACY IN BRITAIN 206-07 (1979) ("A concept flexible enough to comprise opposite ideas is not a likely subject for legislation."); Marshall, The Right to Privacy: A Sceptical View, 21 MCGILL L. J. 242 (1975); Taylor, Privacy and the Public, 34 MOD. L. REV. 288, 289-90 (1971).

⁵¹See, e.g., G. PATON, A TEXTBOOK OF JURISPRUDENCE 531-36 (G. Paton & D. Derham 4th ed. 1972) (ambiguity of the term "property" in modern English law).

⁵²This view has been taken in R. POSNER, THE ECONOMICS OF JUSTICE 232-34 (1981). For a response, see Englard, Book Review, 95 HARV. L. REV. 1162, 1177 (1982).

⁵³See, e.g., Reynolds v. Clarke, 1 Strange 634, 635, 93 Eng. Rep. 747, 748 (K.B. 1726) (opinion of Lord Raymond, C.J.) (opposing the use of case for a trespass) ("We must keep up the boundaries of actions, otherwise we shall introduce the utmost confusion."); Y.B. Mich. 21 Hen. 7, fo. 30, pl. 5 (1504) (argument of Sgt. Pigot) (opposing the use of assumpsit for debt) ("[O]ne can never have an action on the case where one can have another action at common law"); Watkin's Case, Y.B. Hil. 3 Hen. 6, fo. 36, pl. 33 (C.P. 1425) (opinion of Martin, J.) (opposing the use of assumpsit for an unsealed covenant) ("[I]f this action be maintainable . . . for every broken covenant in the world a man shall have an action of trespass").

⁵⁴On the difficulty of measuring the influence of contemporary economic and philosophical trends on the nineteenth century judiciary, see P. ATIYAH, THE RISE AND FALL OF FREEDOM OF CONTRACT 370-74 (1979) (influence of Mill's political economy and Benthamite utilitarianism at mid-century).

⁵⁵At a jurisprudential level, the debate remains very much alive in twentieth century England. See P. DEVLIN, THE ENFORCEMENT OF MORALS (1965); H.L.A. HART, LAW, LIBERTY AND MORALITY (1963).

⁵⁶J.S. MILL, ON LIBERTY 63 (1st ed. London 1859) (G. Himmelfarb ed. 1974). Mill was quick to admit that "the practical question where to place that limit -- how to make the fitting adjustment between individual independence and social control -- is a subject on which nearly everything remains to be done." Id.

⁵⁷J.S. MILL, PRINCIPLES OF POLITICAL ECONOMY 306 (1st ed. London 1848) (D. Winch ed. 1970). Mill may not have dared mention privacy explicitly after his editing of Jeremy Bentham's Rationale of Judicial Evidence, in which the concept is roundly traduced at prodigious length. See Rationale of Judicial Evidence (J. Mill ed. London 1827), in 6 THE WORKS OF JEREMY BENTHAM 187, 351-80 (J. Bowring ed. 1843) [hereinafter cited as WORKS].

⁵⁸J. STEPHEN, LIBERTY, EQUALITY, FRATERNITY 160 (1st ed. 1873) (R. White ed. 1967). See also F. MONTAGUE, THE LIMITS OF INDIVIDUAL LIBERTY 196 (1885) ("[A] public opinion which did not respect the privacies of life would make life intolerable to all men . . .").

⁵⁹J. STEPHEN, supra note 58, at 160.

⁶⁰See, e.g., The Taste for Privacy and Publicity, 61 SPECTATOR 782 (1888); Secrecy, 60 NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE 224 (1840). The pragmatic approach to a definition of privacy recognizes that claims to privacy are never absolute but are made for the very reason that some strong opposing interest is already in sight. This recognition avoids the philosophical objection that total and perfect privacy would be humanly intolerable.

⁶¹J. STEPHEN, supra note 58, at 160.

⁶²See pages 13-16, 34-37 infra. The division into spheres of influence does not provide a complete solution. See J. LUCAS, THE PRINCIPLES OF POLITICS 182 (1966).

⁶³See pages 16-20, 38-40 infra.

⁶⁴See pages 20-24, 40-43 infra.

⁶⁵See Note, supra note 13. It should be obvious that the three sets of boundaries just described can sometimes offer overlapping protection to a unitary interest in privacy. Personal information may be communicated confidentially within the private property of the subject. If, for example, a husband communicates some matter of great delicacy concerning himself to his wife in the bedroom of their home, the law may afford protection from physical or mechanical eavesdroppers on the basis of private property, while it may allow the wife to refuse to testify to (and permit the husband to enjoin the wife from publishing) the confidential communication; moreover, the law it may shield the husband from forced disclosure himself on the basis of personal information. In evolving all of these legal protections, however, English courts have treated the categories as distinct ones and have applied the language of privacy to all three.

⁶⁶2 W. BLACKSTONE, COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND *4.

⁶⁷4 id. at *223.

⁶⁸See 15 PARL. HIST. ENG. 1307 (1763) (remarks of Sir William Pitt).

There is no official record of the much quoted version of this speech:

The poorest man may in his cottage bid defiance to all the forces of the Crown. It may be frail -- its roof may shake -- the wind may blow through it -- the storm may enter -- the rain may enter -- but the King of England cannot enter! -- all his force dares not cross the threshold of the ruined tenement!

H. BROUGHAM, HISTORICAL SKETCHES OF STATESMEN WHO FLOURISHED IN THE TIME OF GEORGE III, 1st ser., at 41-42 (London 1839). See also A. DALRYMPLE, PARLIAMENTARY REFORM 10-11 (2d ed. London 1792) (continued veneration of the maxim in a time of conservative reaction to the French Revolution); W. YOUNG, THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION OF GOVERNMENT 56-57 (2d ed. London 1793) (same). For an earlier objection to excisemen entering dwelling-houses, using much the same rhetoric, see 8 PARL. HIST. ENG. 1317-18 (1733) (remarks of Sir John Barnard).

⁶⁹See Y.B. Mich. 21 Hen. 7, fo. 39, pl. 50 (1499). On the dating of this case to 1499, see Baker, Introduction, in 2 THE REPORTS OF SIR JOHN SPELMAN 168 (Selden Soc'y 94, J. Baker ed. 1978).

⁷⁰Semayne's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 91a, 91b, 77 Eng. Rep. 194, 195 (K.B. 1605). Coke used the maxim on many other occasions, sometimes with stronger privacy overtones. See, e.g., The Case of the King's Prerogative in Saltpetre, 12 Co. Rep. 12, 13, 77 Eng. Rep. 1294, 1296 (Sergeants' Inn 1606) (royal ministers mining for this strategic resource could not dig under any houses) ("[M]y house is the safest place for my refuge, safety and comfort, and of all my family; . . . and it is very necessary for the weal public, that the habitation of subjects be preserved and maintained.").

⁷¹See Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East 1, 154-55, 104 Eng. Rep. 501, 560 (K.B. 1811), aff'd, 4 Taun. 401, 128 Eng. Rep. 384 (Exch. Ch. 1812), aff'd, 5 Dow. 165, 3 Eng. Rep. 1289 (Ch. 1817); Ratcliffe v. Burton, 3 Bos. & Pul. 223, 229, 127 Eng. Rep. 123, 126 (C.P. 1802) (opinion of Lord Alvanley, C.J.) (Once the outer door is passed, a sheriff must still request the owner to open inner doors and chests before using force.).

⁷²See Entick v. Carrington, 19 Howell St. Tr. 1029, 1066, 2 Wils. K.B. 275, 291-92, 95 Eng. Rep. 807, 817-18 (C.P. 1765); Wilkes v. Wood, Lofft 1, 18, 98 Eng. Rep. 489, 498 (C.P. 1763); Huckle v. Money, 2 Wils. K.B. 205, 207, 95 Eng. Rep. 768, 769 (C.P. 1763) (opinion of Pratt, C.J.).

⁷³See Bruce v. Rawlins, 3 Wils. K.B. 61, 62, 95 Eng. Rep. 934, 934 (C.P. 1770) (per Lord Wilmot, C.J.) ("This is an unlawful entry into a man's house (which is his castle), an invasion upon his wife and family at peace and quietness therein, frightened and surprised by these defendants; who under pretence of information received, and colour of legal authority, demand the keys of, and search all the boxes and drawers in the house."); Bostock v. Saunders, 2 W. Bl. 912, 214, 96 Eng. Rep. 539, 540 (C.P. 1773) (opinion of De Grey, C.J.), overruled, Cooper v. Booth, 3 Esp. 135, 170 Eng. Rep. 564, 1 T.R. 535, 99 Eng. Rep. 1238 (K.B. 1785).

⁷⁴See Meade's Case, 1 Lewin Cr. Cas. 184, 185, 168 Eng. Rep. 1006, 1006 (York Assizes 1823) (instructions of Holroyd, J.) ("A civil trespass will not excuse the firing of a pistol at a trespasser"); R. v. Scully, 1 Car. & P. 319, 319-20, 171 Eng. Rep. 1213, 1213 (Gloucester Assizes 1824) (instructions of Garrow, B.) (servant's shooting of trespasser in garden or yard only justified if servant's life endangered); Dakin's Case, 1 Lewin Cr. Cas. 166, 167, 168 Eng. Rep. 999, 1000 (Lancaster Assizes 1828) (instructions of Bayley, J.) ("If the prisoner had known of the back-way, it would have been his duty to have gone out"); Wild's Case, 2 Lewin Cr. Cas. 214, 214, 168 Eng. Rep. 1132, 1132 (Liverpool Assizes 1837) (instructions of Alderson, B.) ("A kick is not a justifiable mode of turning a man out of your house"). For later cases moderating the householder's defense, see R. v. Symondson, 60 J.P. 645, 646 (Cent. Crim. Ct. 1896) (instructions of Kennedy, J.) ("You must not shoot a trespasser merely because he is a trespasser."); R. v. Dennis, 69 J.P. 256, 256 (Cent. Crim. Ct. 1905) ("It may be an unlawful act if the person deliberately fires at the burglar.").

⁷⁵See, e.g., R. v. Moir, 72 ANN. REG. 1830 at 344, 347 (Chelmsford Assizes, July 30, 1830) (unsuccessful claim "my land is my castle"); Shooting Burglars, 76 SATURDAY REV. 534, 534-35 (1893) (advice from Mr. Justice Willes).

⁷⁶J. PATERSON, COMMENTARIES ON THE LIBERTY OF THE SUBJECT AND THE LAWS OF ENGLAND RELATING TO THE SECURITY OF THE PERSON 355 (1877).

⁷⁷Entick v. Carrington, 19 Howell St. Tr. 1029, 1066, 2 Wils. K.B. 275, 291, 95 Eng. Rep. 807, 817 (C.P. 1765) (opinion of Lord Camden, C.J.) ("Our law holds the property of every man so sacred that no man can set his foot upon his neighbour's close without his leave. If he does, he is a trespasser, though he does no damage at all; if he will tread upon his neighbour's ground, he must justify it by law.").

⁷⁸Merest v. Harvey, 5 Taunt. 442, 443, 128 Eng. Rep. 761, 761 (C.P. 1814) (opinion of Gibbs, C.J.).

⁷⁹Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East 1, 154-55, 104 Eng. Rep. 501, 560 (K.B. 1811), aff'd, 4 Taun. 401, 128 Eng. Rep. 384 (Exch. Ch. 1812), aff'd, 5 Dow. 165, 3 Eng. Rep. 1289 (Ch. 1817).

⁸⁰See, e.g., The English, the Scots, and the Irish, EUR. REV., Oct. 1824, at 63; Letter from William Austin, London, Aug. 30, 1802, in W. AUSTIN, LITERARY PAPERS 142 (J. Austin ed. 1890); R. EMERSON, Wealth, in ENGLISH TRAITS 92-93 (London 1856); H. HEINE, ENGLISH FRAGMENTS n.p. (from ALLGEMEINEN POLITISCHEN ANNALEN, 1828) (S. Norris trans. 1880); R. COLLIER, ENGLISH HOME LIFE 13 (1885).

⁸¹2 Vern. 646, 33 Eng. Rep. 1022 (Ch. 1709).

⁸²2 Vern. at 646, 33 Eng. Rep. at 1022.

⁸³Knowles v. Richardson, 1 Mod. Rep. 55, 86 Eng. Rep. 727 (K.B. 1670) (opinion of Twisden, J.).

⁸⁴3 Camp. 80, 82, 170 Eng. Rep. 1312, 1313 (N.P. 1811).

⁸⁵Cotterell v. Griffiths, 4 Esp. 69, 170 Eng. Rep. 644 (K.B. 1801) was one such action.

⁸⁶3 Camp. at 82, 170 Eng. Rep. at 1313 (opinion of Le Blanc, J.).

⁸⁷31 L.J.C.P. (n.s.) 342, 347 (Exch. Ch. 1862), aff'd sub nom Tapling v. Jones, 11 H.L.C. 290, 305, 11 Eng. Rep. 1344, 1350, 12 L.T. Rep. 555 (1865) (opinion of Lord Westbury, L.C.) (invasion of privacy by opening windows "is not treated by the law as a wrong for which any remedy is given."). See also Turner v. Spooner, 30 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 801, 803 (1861) (opinion of Kindersley, V.C.) ("[N]o doubt the owner of a house would prefer that a neighbour should not have the right of looking into his windows or yard but neither this Court nor a Court of law will interfere on the mere ground of invasion of privacy . . .").

⁸⁸L.R. 6 Eq. 311 (1868).

⁸⁹1 Ch. D. 673, 681 (1875).

⁹⁰Editor's Note, in C. KENNY, A SELECTION OF CASES ILLUSTRATIVE OF THE ENGLISH LAW OF TORT 367 (4th ed. 1926).

⁹¹See Victoria Park Racing & Recreation Grounds Co. Ltd. v. Taylor, [1937] Argus L.R. 597, 611, 58 C.L.R. 479, 520-21 (Austl. 1937) (Evatt, J., dissenting); Winfield, supra note 17, at 27.

⁹²Walker v. Brewster, L.R. 5 Eq. 25, 26 (1867).

⁹³Bucclench (Duke) v. Metropolitan Bd. of Works, L.R. 4 E. & I. App. 418, 439 (1872) (recovery under the Land Clauses Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 18, { 63, and the Thames Embankment Act, 1862, 25 & 26 Vict., ch. 93, { 27). Cf. Re Penny, 7 El. & Bl. 660, 669, 119 Eng. Rep. 1390, 1394 (Q.B. 1857) (no recovery under the Land Clauses Act, supra, and the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vict., ch. 20, { 6, for loss in value of property overlooked by railway platform).

⁹⁴Harrison v. Rutland (Duke), [1893] 1 Q.B. 142, 145-46, 152 (C.A. 1892) (opinion of Lord Esher, M.R.).

⁹⁵Hickman v. Maisey, [1900] 1 Q.B. 752, 755-56, 758 (C.A.).

⁹⁶See 4 W. BLACKSTONE, supra note 56, at *168.

⁹⁷J. Lyons & Sons v. Wilkins, [1899] 1 Ch. 255, 267 (C.A. 1898) (opinion of Lindley, M.R.).

⁹⁸See, e.g., Jefferys v. Boosey, 4 H.L.C. 815, 978-79, 10 Eng. Rep. 681, 745 (1854) (opinion of Lord St. Leonard's) (distinguishing common law property in a manuscript and statutory copyright); Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Mer. 435, 438, 35 Eng. Rep. 1006, 1007 (Ch. 1817) (opinion of Lord Eldon, L.C.); Queensberry (Duke) v. Shebbeare, 2 Eden 329, 330, 28 Eng. Rep. 924, 925 (Ch. 1758) (injunction to restrain printing of unpublished manuscript).

⁹⁹See Pope v. Curl, 2 Atk. 341, 342, 26 Eng. Rep. 608, 608 (Ch.

1741) (opinion of Lord Hardwicke, L.C.) (Letters give "only a special property in the receiver," not "a license to any person whatsoever to publish them to the world."); 3 R. WOODDESON, A SYSTEMATICAL VIEW OF THE LAWS OF ENGLAND 415 (1792).

¹⁰⁰2 Ves. & Beam. 19, 28, 35 Eng. Rep. 225, 229 (Ch. 1813) (opinion of Sir Thomas Plumer, V.C.).

¹⁰¹2 Swan. 402, 426, 36 Eng. Rep. 670, 678 (Ch. 1818). See also Lytton (Earl) v. Devey, 54 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 293, 295-96 (1884) (opinion of Bacon, V.C.).

¹⁰²Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2303, 2379, 98 Eng. Rep. 201, 242 (K.B. 1769) (Yates, J., dissenting).

¹⁰³See Oliver v. Oliver, 11 C.B. (n.s.) 139, 141, 142 Eng. Rep. 748, 748 (1861).

¹⁰⁴Thurston v. Charles, 21 T.L.R. 659 (K.B. 1905) (opinion of Walton, J.).

¹⁰⁵See Lytton (Earl) v. Devey, 54 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 293, 295-96 (1884) (opinion of Bacon, V.C.).

¹⁰⁶FATHER OF CANDOR, AN ENQUIRY INTO THE DOCTRINE, LATELY PROPAGATED, CONCERNING LIBELS, WARRANTS AND THE SEIZURE OF PAPERS 59 (London 1764). See Post Office Act, 1710, 9 Anne ch. 10, { 40, later reenacted in Post Office Act, 1837, 7 Wm. 4 & 1 Vict., ch. 36, { 25, currently codified in Post Office Act, 1969, ch. 48, { 64.

¹⁰⁷See R. v. Jones, 2 C. & K. 236, 245, 175 Eng. Rep. 98, 102 (Q.B. 1846) (interception of letter held larceny); R. v. James, 24 Q.B.D. 436, 440 (1890) (inducing postman to intercept letter held theft).

¹⁰⁸See 75 PARL. DEB. (3rd ser.) 892-906, 1264-1305 (1844) (remarks of Mr. Duncombe and ensuing debate); 77 id. at 668-97, 738-45 (1845) (remarks of Mr. Duncombe and Mr. Wakley); Opening Letters at the Post Office, 33 LAW MAGAZINE 248, 256 (1845); Post-Office Espionage, 2 N.

BRIT. REV. 257, 260 (1844) ("[T]he English feeling that this was a disgraceful business spread all over the country."); The Post Office Inquiry, 2 LITTELL'S LIVING AGE 407, 411-12 (1844). See also A. HARLOW, OLD POST BAGS 468 (1928); W. TEGG, POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS, PAST AND PRESENT 66-67 (1878). For an earlier outcry, see 9 PARL. HIST. ENG. 839, 842 (1735) ("Complaints were made by several Members . . . that the liberty given to break open letters at the post-office could now serve no purpose, but to enable the little clerks about that office to pry into the private affairs of every merchant, and of every gentleman in the kingdom."). For later objections, see 267 PARL. DEB. (3rd ser.) 289-93 (remarks of Mr. O'Donnell and Mr. Sexton); 258 PARL. DEB. (3rd ser.) 1080-81 (1881) (remarks of Mr. Labouchere); Letter-Opening at the General Post Office, 39 CHAMBERS'S J. 395 (1863).

¹⁰⁹ See REPORT FROM THE SECRET COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS RELATIVE TO THE POST OFFICE, (H.L. Rep. No. 601), in 14 PARL. PAPERS 1844 501, at [2]; Post-Office Espionage, supra note 108, at 284 ("[W]herever a free Government exists, the sanctity of private correspondence going through the Post-office is the subject of special enactments."). Predictably, Jeremy Bentham opposed the notion of sanctity of correspondence. See J. BENTHAM, Anarchical Fallacies, in 2 WORKS, supra note 57, at 489, 532.

¹¹⁰ See E. KENNETH, THE POST OFFICE IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY 141 (1958).

¹¹¹ The introduction of the post card posed a similar problem. See Post-Cards v. Envelopes, 47 CHAMBERS'S J. 565, 566-67 (1870). One solution for securing both new forms of communication was widespread resort to codes and ciphers, such as had been used in times of rampant letter spying. See J. WILKINS, MERCURY, OR THE SECRET AND SWIFT MESSENGER (London 1641) (early code book); Post-Cards v. Envelopes, supra.

¹¹² See R. BOND, HANDBOOK OF THE TELEGRAPH 7-8 (3d ed. 1870).

¹¹³ See Post Office Protection Act, 1884, 47 & 48 Vict., ch. 76, { 11; Telegraph Act, 1868, 31 & 32 Vict., ch. 110, { 20.

¹¹⁴ Borough of Stroud, 2 O'M. & H. 107, 112 (Election Petitions 1874) (opinion of Bramwell, B.) ("[P]ersons who correspond by telegram are obliged to repose confidence in the Crown, and I believe it will be for the public good if it is found that that is a confidence that the Crown cannot be compelled to violate."). This holding expanded the decision in Borough of Taunton, 2 O'M. & H. 66, 73 (Election Petitions 1874) (opinion of Grove J.) (no compulsion to produce telegrams without strong specific grounds) and contradicted Ince's Case, 20 L.T. (n.s.) 421 (Election Petitions 1869) (opinion of Willes J.) (subpoenaed telegram not privileged).

¹¹⁵ See Attorney-General v. Edison Telephone Co., 6 Q.B. 244 (Exch. 1880).

¹¹⁶ Letters, to be protected from compulsory disclosure in court, had to come under one of these privileges. O'Shea v. Wood, [1891] P. 286, 290 (C.A.) (opinion of Kay, L.J.); R. v. Derrington, 2 Car. & p. 418, 419, 172 Eng. Rep. 189, 190 (Hereford Assizes 1826) (opinion of Garrow, B.) (prisoner's letter intercepted by gaoler is admissible unless within a privileged relationship)."

¹¹⁷ Annesley v. Anglesea (Earl), 17 Howell St. Tr. 1139, 1241 (Ir. Exch. 1743). See also Berd v. Lovelace, Cary 62, 21 Eng. Rep. 33 (Ch. 1577) (accord).

¹¹⁸ Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 M. & K. 98, 104, 39 Eng. Rep. 618, 621 (Ch. 1833) (opinion of Lord Brougham, L.C.).

¹¹⁹ Pearse v. Pearse, 11 Jur. 52, 55 (Ch. 1847).

¹²⁰ See, e.g., Friend v. London, Chatham, & Dover Ry. Co., L.R. 2 Ex.

D. 437 (1877) (medical report made solely for informing solicitor held privileged); Cossey v. London, Brighton, & S. Coast Ry. Co., L.R. 5 C.P. 146 (1870) (same).

¹²¹See, e.g., Ruthven v. De Bor, 45 Sol. J. 272 (Q.B. 1901);

Normanshaw v. Normanshaw, 69 L.T. (n.s.) 469, 470 (P. 1893); R. v. Hay, 2 F. & F. 4, 9-10, 175 Eng. Rep. 933, 936 (Durham Assizes 1860); Gilham's Case, 1 Moody's Crown Cases 186, 198 (Taunton Assizes 1828).

¹²²See Wheeler v. Le Marchant, 17 Ch. D. 675, 681 (C.A. 1881)

(opinion of Jessel, M.R.); Greenlaw v. King, 1 Beav. 137, 145, 48 Eng. Rep. 891, 894 (Ch. 1838) (opinion of Lord Langdale, M.R.); R. v. Kingston (Duchess), 20 Howell St. Tr. 355, 573 (H.L. 1776) (opinion of Lord Mansfield, C.J.). Bentham advocated capitalizing on the public perception of confidentiality in communications to clergymen. See Letter from Jeremy Bentham to Charles Abbott, Nov. 1800, in 10 WORKS, supra note 57, at 351, 354 (Curates should be required to collect census data.).

¹²³See Kitson v. Playfair, Times, Mar. 28, 1896, at 5, col. 1 (Q.B., Mar. 27, 1896) (opinion of Hawkins, J.); R. v. Griffin, 6 Cox C.C. 219 (Cent. Crim. Ct. 1853) (opinion of Alderson, B.); Broad v. Pitt, 3 Car. & P. 518, 519, 172 Eng. Rep. 528, 529, M. & M. 233, 234, 173 Eng. Rep. 1142, 1143 (C.P. 1828) (opinion of Best, C.J.). See also E. BADELEY, THE PRIVILEGE OF RELIGIOUS CONFESSIONS IN ENGLISH COURTS OF JUSTICE (London 1865); Maude, Privileged Communications, 48 MONTH 27, 36 (1883) (urging judicial recognition of a priest-penitent privilege).

¹²⁴See, e.g., Stapleton v. Crofts, 18 Q.B. 367, 368, 118 Eng. Rep.

137, 138 (1852); O'Connor v. Marjoribanks, 4 Man. & G. 435, 445-46, 134 Eng. Rep. 179, 183 (C.P. 1842); Monroe v. Twistleton, Peake Add. Cas. 219, 221, 170 Eng. Rep. 250, 251 (N.P. 1802) (privilege survived divorce).

¹²⁵See Evidence Amendment Act, 1853, 16 & 17 Vict., ch. 83 (husbands and wives competent to testify in civil cases); Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, 61 & 62 Vict., ch. 36 (husbands and wives competent to testify for defense in criminal cases).

¹²⁶See, e.g., Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, 61 & 62 Vict., ch. 36, { 1(d) (1898). See also Cowley v. Cowley, Times, Jan. 20, 1897, at 13, col. 3 (P., Jan. 19, 1897) (opinion of Barnes, J.) (In divorce proceedings, husband could refuse to produce letter written to him by wife.). Judicial attitudes preceded the legislative change. See Stapleton v. Crofts, 18 Q.B.D. 367, 368, 118 Eng. Rep. 137, 138 (1852).

¹²⁷Wennhak v. Morgan, 20 Q.B.D. 635, 639 (1888) (per Manisty, J.) (disclosure of libel to wife held not evidence of publication).

¹²⁸Doker v. Hasler, Ry. & M. 198, 198, 171 Eng. Rep. 992, 992 (N.P. 1824) (opinion of Best, C.J.).

¹²⁹See 7 J. BENTHAM, supra note 57, at 486 [5:340] (while the law "make[s] every man's house his castle," the privilege "convert[s] that castle into a den of thieves.").

¹³⁰In re Agar-Ellis, 24 Ch. D. 317, 335 (C.A. 1883) (opinion of Bowen, L.J.) (custody proceeding).

¹³¹J. STEPHEN, supra note 58, at 160, 162.

¹³²See R. v. Friend, 13 Howell St. Tr. 1, 17 (K.B. 1696) (opinion of Holt, C.J.); 4 W. BLACKSTONE, supra note 66, at *296. See generally L. LEVY, ORIGINS OF THE FIFTH AMENDMENT (1968); Wigmore, Nemo Tenetur Seipsum Prodere, 5 HARV. L. REV. 71 (1891).

Official seizure of private papers was also condemned by English judicial authority, partly on this ground and partly as trespass to goods, since "where private papers are removed and carried away, the secret nature of those goods will be an aggravation of the trespass and demand more considerable damages in that respect," Entick v. Carrington, 19 Howell St. Tr. 1029, 1066, 1073, 2 Wils. K.B. 275, 291, 95 Eng. Rep. 807, 817-18 (C.P. 1765) (opinion of Lord Camden, C.J.). See Opening Letters at the Post Office, 33 LAW MAGAZINE 248, 255 (1845).

¹³³See Abolition of the Court of High Commission, 1641, 16 Ch. 1, ch. 11, { 4, reconfirmed in Ecclesiastical Commission Act, 1661, 13 Ch. 2, ch. 12, { 4; Law of Evidence Amendment Act, 1851, 14 & 15 Vict., ch. 99, { 3. But see Langbein, The Criminal Trail before the Lawyers, 45 U. CHI. L. REV. 263, 283 (little use of the privilege in 18th century practice).

¹³⁴See, e.g., Mexborough (Earl) v. Whitford Urban Dist. Council, [1897] 2 Q.B. 111 (C.A.); Pye v. Butterfield, 5 B. & S. 829, 122 Eng. Rep. 1038 (Q.B. 1864).

¹³⁵Compare Adams v. Lloyd, 3 H. & N. 351, 363, 157 Eng. Rep. 506, 510 (Exch. 1858) (opinion of Pollock, C.B.) ("[T]he answer of the witness must have a direct tendency to place him in danger.") with Harrison v. Southcote, 1 Atk. 528, 539, 26 Eng. Rep. 333, 340 (Ch. 1751) (opinion of Lord Hardwicke, L.C.) ("[A] man shall not be obliged to discover what may subject him to a penalty, not what must only.") (emphasis in original).

¹³⁶Compare Adams v. Lloyd, 3 H. & N. 351, 362, 157 Eng. Rep. 506, 510 (Exch. 1858) (opinion of Pollock, C.B.) (Judge may determine that a witness is trifling with the court and compel an answer.) and Ex parte Reynolds, 20 Ch. D. 294, 297 (1882) (opinion of Bacon, C.J.) (same) with Lamb v. Munster, 10 Q.B.D. 110, 113 (1882) (opinion of Stephen, J.) (Witness may swear that the answer may endanger him.) and Cates v. Hardacre, 3 Taunt. 424, 425, 128 Eng. Rep. 168, 168 (C.P. 1811) (opinion of Lord Mansfield, C.J.) (enough that witness "thought" an answer would incriminate him, links in chain need not be apparent to the judge).

¹³⁷See Da Costa v. Jones, 2 Cowp. 729, 736, 98 Eng. Rep. 1331, 1335

(K.B. 1778) (opinion of Lord Mansfield) (refusing to hear an action brought on a wager as to the sex of a third party); Ditchburn v. Goldsmith, 4 Camp. 152, 153, 171 Eng. Rep. 49, 49 (N.P. 1815) (opinion of Gibbs, C.J.) (refusing to hear an action brought on a wager as to the sex of a child about to be born to an unmarried woman).

¹³⁸ For a proposal to record names, ages, addresses, and occupations, under oath, in the Census of 1801, despite "those suspicions which ignorance is so apt to harbour," see Letter from Jeremy Bentham to Charles Abbott, Nov. 1800, in 10 WORKS, supra note 57, at 351, 351-52, 355-56. For proposals to compile registers of identifying characteristics, see A. BERTILLON, SIGNALETIC INSTRUCTIONS vii-ix (1896) (anthropometrical identification); Galton, Identification by Fingertips, 30 NINETEENTH CENTURY 303, 305 (1891) (fingerprints used by British magistrate in Bengal to identify natives).

¹³⁹ See, e.g., The Census, 23 CORNHILL MAGAZINE 415, 424 (1871); Census Curiosities, 5 ALL THE YEAR ROUND 15, 15-16 (1861); Curiosities of the Census, 22 N. BRIT. REV. 401, 402-03 (1855). Earlier opposition is recorded in Census of England and Wales and of the United Kingdom, 1881, 44 J. STATISTICAL SOC'Y 398, 399-400 (1881).

¹⁴⁰ See Confession of Elizabeth Bowtell, May 26, 1595, quoted in Hall, Some Elizabethan Penances in the Diocese of Ely, 1 TRANS. ROYAL HIST. SOC'Y (3d ser.) 263, 272 (1907) (ecclesiastical offense of gossiping).

¹⁴¹ See Loyd v. Freshfield, 2 Car. & P. 325, 329, 172 Eng. Rep. 147, 148 (C.P. 1826).

¹⁴² See Foster v. Bank of London, 3 F. & F. 214, 217, 176 Eng. Rep. 96, 98 (N.P. 1862) (jury finding).

¹⁴³ See Tipping v. Clarke, 2 Hare 383, 393, 67 Eng. Rep. 157, 161 (Ch. 1843) (opinion of Sir James Wigram, V.C.) (clerk's implied contract not to reveal what he learns in the course of duty).

¹⁴⁴But see Hardy v. Vesey, L.R. 3 Ex. 107, 111-13 (1868) (violation of duty justified when motive is to assist customer).

¹⁴⁵The appetite of the newspaper-buying public for scandalous personal information can be taken as constant over the period. See Perkins, The Origins of the Popular Press, 7 HIST. TODAY 425, 434 (1957). For complaints, see Phillipps, The New Journalism, 13 NEW REV. 182, 184 (1895) ("private persons" subject to "constant spying and badgering of the society papers"); Newspaper Libels, 67 SATURDAY REV. 462 (1889); The Taste for Privacy and Publicity, 61 SPECTATOR 782 (1888); Secrecy, 60 NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE 224 (1840). But see The Privilege of Privacy, 69 SPECTATOR 733 (1892) (poorer classes intolerant of individual privacy concerns); The Defence of Privacy, 66 SPECTATOR 200 (1891) (little hope for effective legal remedies).

¹⁴⁶See, e.g., McPherson v. Daniels, 10 B. & C. 263, 272, 109 Eng. Rep. 448, 451 (K.B. 1829) (opinion of Littledale, J.) ("[T]he law will not permit a man to recover damages in respect of an injury to a character which he either does not, or ought not, to possess.").

¹⁴⁷See J. BENTHAM, Rationale of Judicial Evidence, in 6 WORKS, supra note 57, at 189, 269-70.

¹⁴⁸See, e.g., J. FISHER & J. STRAHAN, THE LAW OF THE PRESS 175-76 (1891); "The Greater the Truth, the Greater the Libel", 26 CAN. L. TIMES 394, 394-95 (1906). The common law rule was modified by Lord Campbell's Act, 1843, 6 & 7 Vict., ch. 96, § 6 (publication of a defamatory truth not criminal if jury determines publication was for public benefit).

¹⁴⁹See Wilson v. Reed, 2 F. & F. 149, 152, 175 Eng. Rep. 1000, 1002 (N.P. 1860) (instructions of Hill, J.); Bembridge v. Latimer, 10 L.T. (n.s.) 816 (C.P. 1864); J. FISHER & J. STRAHAN, supra note 148, at 133 (strictness of proof). An example is Leyman v. Latimer, 47 L.J. Ex.

(n.s.) 470, 472 (1878) (opinion of Brett, L.J.), holding the appellation "felon" to be untrue of one whose sentence has been served and finding it "wicked and malignant" to thus "rake up the past misdoings of others."

¹⁵⁰ See, e.g., Pankhurst v. Hamilton, 3 T.L.R. 500, 505 (Q.B. 1887) (Grove, J., instructing the jury) ("Matters discussed between gentlemen at clubs, dinner parties, or in the lobby of the House of Commons ought not to be seriously repeated.").

¹⁵¹ See, e.g., Clark v. Freeman, 11 Beav. 112, 117-18, 50 Eng. Rep. 759, 761 (Ch. 1848) (no injunction to prevent publication of a libel unless property injured); Gee v. Prichard, 2 Swanst. 402, 426, 36 Eng. Rep. 670, 678 (Ch. 1818) (property basis of injunction to restrain publication of letters). But see Morison v. Moat, 9 Hare 241, 68 Eng. Rep. 492 (Ch. 1852) (injunction granted for breach of faith and of contract), aff'd 21 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 248 (1852).

¹⁵² 2 De G. & Sm. 652, 64 Eng. Rep. 293 (Ch. 1848), aff'd, 1 Mac. & G. 25, 41 Eng. Rep. 1171, 1 H. & Tw. 1, 47 Eng. Rep. 1302 (Ch. 1849). For another expression of deference to royal sensibilities, see Wyatt v. Wilson, 1 Mac. & G. 46, 41 Eng. Rep. 1179, 1 H. & Tw. 25, 47 Eng. Rep. 1311 (Ch. 1820) (opinion of Lord Eldon) ("If one of the late king's physicians had kept a diary of what he heard and saw, this Court would not, in the king's lifetime, have permitted him to print and publish it.").

¹⁵³ 2 De G. & Sm. at 670, 64 Eng. Rep. at 301.

¹⁵⁴ 2 De G. & Sm. at 698, 64 Eng. Rep. at 313.

¹⁵⁵ 1 Mac. & G. at 47, 41 Eng. Rep. at 1179, 1 H. & Tw. at 26, 47 Eng. Rep. at 1312 (opinion of Lord Cottenham, L.C.).

¹⁵⁶ Dixon v. Holden, L.R. 7 Eq. 488, 492 (1869) (opinion of Sir Richard Malins, V.C.).

¹⁵⁷See Pollard v. Photographic Co., 40 Ch. D. 345, 349, 352, (1888) (opinion of North J.) (married woman's photograph sold as Christmas card). See also Stedall v. Houghton, 18 T.L.R. 126 (Ch. 1901) (opinion of Swinfen Eady, J.) (On the same double grounds, husband restrained the exhibition of photographs of his estranged wife and children.). It was much doubted whether the courts could have reached this result under the Copyright (Works of Art) Act, 1862, 25 & 26 Vict., ch. 68, { 1. See Williams, The Sale of Photographic Portraits, 24 SOLIC. J. 4, 4-5 (1879).

¹⁵⁸See Monson v. Tussauds, Ltd., [1894] 1 Q.B. 671. The opportunity for a ruling on the law of privacy in this case drew widespread attention. See Speed, The Right of Privacy, 163 N. AM. REV. 64, 70-71 (1896); Note, 7 HARV. L. REV. 492 (1894).

¹⁵⁹See [1894] 1 Q.B. at 678 (opinion of Matthew, J.) (For a newspaper "to shadow a man who had been acquitted of a crime, to take portraits of him and to publish them . . . would be a sharp instrument of torture, and an outrage on the man's comfort and peace."), id. at 687 (opinion of Lord Halsbury) ("Is it possible to say that everything which has once been known may be reproduced with impunity in print or picture; . . . every incident which has ever happened in private life, furnish material for the adventurous exhibitor . . . ?").

¹⁶⁰See, e.g., Dockrell v. Dougall, 80 L.T. 556, 15 T.L.R. 333 (C.A. 1899) (use of name); Corelli v. Wall, 22 T.L.R. 532 (C.A. 1906) (postcards depicting novelist).

¹⁶¹See generally pages 34-43 infra. For example, courts continued to reject claims based on publication of photographs in Sports & Gen. Press Agency, Ltd. v. "Our Dogs" Publishing Co., Ltd., [1916] 2 K.B. 880, 889 (dictum of Horridge, J.) (no right to prevent publication of a photograph or description "not libelous or otherwise wrongful"), aff'd [1917] 2 K.B. 125 (C.A.); Wood v. Sandow, Times, June 30, 1914, at 4, col. 1 (K.B., June 29, 1914) (Plaintiff's photograph appeared in corset advertisement; no libel or copyright infringement). But juries could take a different view. See Plumb v. Jeyes' Sanitary Compounds Co., Ltd., Times, Apr. 15, 1937, at 4, col. 4 (K.B., Apr. 14, 1937) (Plaintiff's photograph appeared in footbath advertisement; jury awarded 100 pounds libel damages); Funston v. Pearson, Times, Mar. 12, 1915, at 3, col. 3 (K.B., Mar. 11, 1915) (Plaintiff's photographs with and without false teeth appeared in dentist's advertisement; jury awarded 30 pounds libel damages.).

¹⁶² See Winfield, supra note 18.

¹⁶³ See Dworkin, supra note 21, at 188-89.

The House of Commons may have considered taking measures against press activities following the press's hounding of Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh during their stay in England. See Adam, Freemen of the Press?, 144 FORTNIGHTLY (n.s.) 34 (1938); Ervine, Privacy and the Lindberghs, 139 FORTNIGHTLY (n.s.) 180 (1936). See also POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC PLANNING, REPORT ON THE BRITISH PRESS (1938) (call for legislation). Privacy concerns also played a part in Lord Reading's Preservation of the Rights of the Subject Bill, 1947, introduced, 147 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 762, 767 (1947) (clause 6 on powers of search), and Lord Samuel's Liberties of the Subject Bill, 1950, introduced, 167 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 1041, 1051-52 (1950) (clause 6 on same). Several committees had considered and rejected the possibility of privacy legislation. See REPORT OF THE DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEE ON POWERS OF SUBPOENA OF DISCIPLINARY TRIBUNALS para. 30 (Cmd. 1033, 1960) (Viscount Simonds, Chairman) (allowing evidence from telephone wiretapping); REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF PRIVY COUNCILLORS APPOINTED TO INQUIRE INTO THE INTERCEPTION OF COMMUNICATIONS (Cmd. 283, 1957) (Lord Birkett, Chairman) (approving government wiretapping procedures despite lack of express statutory authorization) [hereinafter cited as BIRKETT COMMITTEE]; ROYAL COMMISSION ON THE PRESS, 1947-1949, REPORT paras. 489-91, 642-43 (Cmd. 7700, 1949) (Sir William Ross, Chairman) ("extremely difficult to devise legislation" on intrusion by reporters); REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE LAW OF DEFAMATION paras. 24-26 (Cmd. 7536, 1948) (Lord Porter, Chairman) (invasion of privacy merely an "offense against good taste"); Lloyd, Reform of the Law of Libel, 5 CURRENT LEGAL PROBS. 168, 176-77 (1952).

¹⁶⁴See, e.g., Director of Public Prosecutions v. Withers, [1975] A.C. 842, 863, 872, [1974] 3 All E.R. 984, 995, 1004, [1974] 3 W.L.R. 751, 762, 771 (1974) (opinion of Lord Simon) (to find a "conspiracy to invade privacy" illegal would interfere with Parliament's consideration of the issue); Malone v. Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (No. 2), [1979] Ch. 344, 380-81, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, 649, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700, 733 (opinion of Megarry, V.C.) (even on a subject [government wiretapping] which "cries out for legislation," the court should avoid a result that would induce Parliament to legislate.).

¹⁶⁵See 228 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 716 (1961); Times, Feb. 16, 1961, at 17, col. 4.

¹⁶⁶See Right of Privacy Bill, 1961, reprinted in YOUNGER COMMITTEE, supra note 1, App. I at 273-74.

¹⁶⁷See, e.g., Editorial, What is Reasonable?, Times, Mar. 13, 1961, at 15, col. 4. See also 229 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 618-19 (1961) (remarks of Earl of Arran).

¹⁶⁸See 229 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 621-24 (1961) (remarks of Lord Goddard) ("It has always seemed to me a blot on our jurisprudence that there is no remedy for a person whose privacy is invaded"); 229 id. at 637-40 (1961) (remarks of Lord Denning) ("[I]f the law does not give the right of privacy, the sooner this Bill gives it the better.").

¹⁶⁹The vote was 74 to 21. 229 id. at 660 (1961).

¹⁷⁰See 229 id. at 625-30; 232 id. at 293-96 (1961) (remarks of Lord Chancellor Kilmuir).

¹⁷¹See 232 id. at 289-90 (1961).

¹⁷²See 229 id. at 639-40 (1961) (remarks of Lord Denning) ("But would not our own courts give a remedy in infringement of privacy? . . . [T]hey ought to."); 232 id. at 295 (1961) (remarks of Lord Chancellor Kilmuir) ([W]hether there is already a right of privacy in Common Law" is a matter which "Judges . . . might have at any time to decide.").

¹⁷³See 740 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 1565 (1967); Right of Privacy Bill, 1967, reprinted in YOUNGER COMMITTEE, supra note 1, App. I at 275.

¹⁷⁴See Editorial, The Private Citizen, Times, June 16, 1967, at 11, col. 1. See generally Baxter, supra note 39, at 7; Vetch, Interests in Personality, 23 N. IR. L.Q. 423, 448 (1972).

¹⁷⁵See 794 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 881 (1970) (remarks of Mr. Lyon). See generally D. MADGWICK, PRIVACY UNDER ATTACK 7 (1968); Dworkin, The Younger Committee Report on Privacy, 36 MOD. L. REV. 399, 402 (1973).

¹⁷⁶See LAW COMMISSION, THIRD ANNUAL REPORT: 1967-68 para. 70 (No. 15, 1968). See also LAW COMMISSION, FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT: 1968-1969 para. 76 (No. 27, 1969) ("[E]arly comprehensive examination of this subject by a widely based commission or committee is essential.").

¹⁷⁷See International Commission of Jurists, Conclusions of the Nordic Conference on Privacy (1967).

¹⁷⁸See JUSTICE, PRIVACY AND THE LAW 2 (1970).

¹⁷⁹See, e.g., Bill of Rights (No. 2) Bill, 1969, introduced, 787 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 1519, 1520 (1969) (Clause 10 provided: "Every person is entitled to protection from arbitrary interference in his personal, family or other private affairs."). See also Unauthorised Telephone Monitoring Bill, 1967; Industrial Information (Protection) Bill, 1968; Private Investigations Bill, 1969; Data Surveillance Bill, 1969; Personal Records (Computers) Bill, 1969; Control of Personal Information Bill, 1971; Security Industry Licensing Bill, 1973; Private Detectives Control Bill, 1974.

¹⁸⁰ See JUSTICE, supra note 177, at 59-62.

¹⁸¹ See 792 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 430 (1969).

¹⁸² See Right of Privacy Bill, 1969, reprinted in YOUNGER COMMITTEE, supra note 1, App. I at 276-78.

¹⁸³ See, e.g., Baistow, Privacy versus Freedom, 79 NEW STATESMAN 108 (1970).

¹⁸⁴ See 794 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 941 (1970) (remarks of Home Secretary Callaghan).

¹⁸⁵ See YOUNGER COMMITTEE, supra note 1, at paras. 1, 3-5.

¹⁸⁶ See id. at paras. 661-67 (majority recommendation); id. at 208-15 (minority reports).

¹⁸⁷ See, e.g., 343 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 104-78 (1973) (inconclusive debate on the Younger Committee report).

¹⁸⁸ See Press Council Is Doubling Its Lay Membership, Times, Nov. 29, 1972, at 6, col. 4. The Press Council, established voluntarily in 1953 to avert statutory imposition, remains firmly opposed to privacy legislation. See Press Council, Policy Statement on Privacy, quoted in Times, Apr. 12, 1976, at 4, col. 1 ("[A]ny attempt to legislate on privacy would be contrary to the public interest."). See generally H. LEVY, THE PRESS COUNCIL 240-69 (1967); G. MURRAY, THE PRESS AND THE PUBLIC 91-92 (1972).

¹⁸⁹ In 1971, the Independent Television Authority set up its Complaints Review Board, see Times, Oct. 4, 1971, at 1, col. 4; and in 1972 the British Broadcasting Corporation established a Programmes Complaints Commission, see Adjudications, 88 LISTENER 83, 83-84 (1972).

¹⁹⁰The Younger Committee report expressed hope that the developing law of breach of confidence could encompass an adequate substitute for a privacy remedy, but the Law Commission's report on breach of confidence carefully distinguishes privacy protection from the statutory remedy it recommends for disclosures in breach of a duty of confidence and for "unlawfully obtained" information. See LAW COMMISSION, BREACH OF CONFIDENCE 5-7 (Law Comm. No. 110, 1981). See also ROYAL COMMISSION ON THE PRESS, FINAL REPORT paras. 19.9-19.18 (Cmnd. 6810, 1977) (Prof. McGregor, Chairman) (reluctantly recommending against a statutory right to privacy); REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CONTEMPT OF COURT para. 216 (Cmnd. 5794, 1974) (Lord Phillimore, Chairman) (recommending minimum interference with the press); REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON DEFAMATION paras. 137-40 (Cmnd. 5909, 1975) (Justice Faulks, Chairman) (rejecting a public benefit component in the defense of justification).

¹⁹¹See 963 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 750-51 (1979) (remarks of Home Secretary Rees).

¹⁹²See THE INTERCEPTION OF COMMUNICATIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN (Cmnd. 7873, 1980) (disclosing the issuance of nearly 1000 warrants for interception annually).

¹⁹³See 982 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 205-20 (1980) (remarks of Home Secretary Whitelaw).

¹⁹⁴See T. BARNES, OPEN UP! 8-9 (Fabian Tract 467, 1980); JUSTICE, FREEDOM OF INFORMATION 8, 10, 17-18 (1978).

¹⁹⁵See pages 32-33 infra.

¹⁹⁶See COMPUTERS AND PRIVACY (Cmnd. 6353, 1975) (promising future legislation); COMPUTERS: SAFEGUARDS FOR PRIVACY (Cmnd. 6354, 1975) (reviewing Britain's computer systems and legislation abroad).

¹⁹⁷ See REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON DATA PROTECTION (Cmd. 7341, 1978) (Sir Norman Lindop, Chairman) (recommending a Data Protection Act establishing a Data Protection Authority) [hereinafter cited as LINDOP COMMITTEE].

¹⁹⁸ See Tendler, Computer Privacy Ombudsman Expected, Times, Dec. 11, 1981, at 5, col. 1.

¹⁹⁹ See Post Office Act, 1969, ch. 48, { 64; Post Office Act, 1953, 1 & 2 Eliz., ch. 36, {{ 52, 56, 58(1); Telegraph Act, 1868, 31 & 32 Vict., ch. 110, { 20; Post Office Protection Act, 1884, 47 & 48 Vict., ch. 76, { 11.

²⁰⁰ See Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1949, 12, 13, & 14 Geo. 6, ch. 54, {{ 1(1), 5(8); Theft Act, 1968, ch. 60 (stealing electricity).

²⁰¹ See, e.g., Finance Act, 1978, ch. 42, { 77; Population (Statistics) Act, 1938, 1 & 2 Geo. 6, ch. 12, { 4; Census Act, 1920, 10 & 11 Geo. 5, ch. 41, { 8(2); Official Secrets Act, 1911, 1 & 2 Geo. 5, ch. 28, { 2.

²⁰² See Judicial Proceedings (Regulation of Reports) Act, 1926, 16 & 17 Geo. 5, ch. 61; Criminal Justice Act, 1967, ch. 80, { 6(1). On the latter provision, see R. v. Stafford, [1973] 1 All E.R. 190, 191, [1972] 1 W.L.R. 1649, 1651 (C.A. 1972) (opinion of Lord Widgery, C.J.) ("the right of an accused person to, as it is said, opt for privacy in committal proceedings).

²⁰³ See Magistrates' Courts Act, 1952, 15 & 16 Geo. 6 & 1 Eliz. 2, ch. 55, { 40.

²⁰⁴ Copyright Act, 1956, 4 & 5 Eliz. 2, ch. 74, { 43; infra note 382.

²⁰⁵ See Television Act, 1954, 2 & 3 Eliz. 2, ch. 55, { 3(1).

²⁰⁶ See Rent Act, 1965, ch. 75, { 30. See Jennison v. Baker, [1972] 2 Q.B. 52, 60, [1972] 1 All E.R. 997, 1000, [1972] 2 W.L.R. 429, 433 (C.A. 1971) (landlord jailed for contempt) ("The tenants' rooms were entered with a pass-key and furniture left disturbed and windows opened so that tenants should know that their privacy had been invaded.").

²⁰⁷ See Administration of Justice Act, 1970, ch. 31, { 40.

²⁰⁸ See Post Office Act, 1953, 1 & 2 Eliz. 2, ch. 36, { 66.

²⁰⁹ See Unsolicited Goods and Services Act, 1971, ch. 30, { 4.

²¹⁰ Consumer Credit Act, 1974, ch. 39, {{ 158-60.

²¹¹ Rehabilitation of Offenders Act, 1974, ch. 53.

²¹² Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act, 1976, ch. 82, { 6.

²¹³ See pages 34-43 infra.

²¹⁴ See H. LAUTERPACHT, AN INTERNATIONAL BILL OF THE RIGHTS OF MAN (1945).

²¹⁵ Universal Declaration, supra note 6.

²¹⁶ Id.

²¹⁷ See, e.g., G.A. Res. 1904, 18 GAOR, Supp. 15, UN Doc. A/5515 at 35 (1963).

²¹⁸ See, e.g., Henkin, Introduction, THE INTERNATIONAL BILL OF RIGHTS 1, 9 (L. Henkin ed. 1981).

²¹⁹ International Covenant, supra note 7.

²²⁰ Id.

²²¹ Id. at art. 2(1) & (2). But see UN Doc. E/CN.4/SR.427 at 10 (1954) (U.K. representative denying that treaties could impose requirement of domestic legislation).

²²² UN Doc. CCPR/C/1 Add. 17 at 1 (1977). See also CENTRAL OFFICE OF INFORMATION, HUMAN RIGHTS IN THE UNITED KINGDOM (R. 3980, 1958).

²²³ See, e.g., 229 PARL. DEB. H.L. (5th ser.) 628-29 (1961) (remarks of Lord Chancellor Kilmuir) (The 1948 Universal Declaration "aim[s] mainly at physical interference, such as the activities of secret police."); International Commission of Jurists, The Legal Protection of Privacy: A Comparative Survey of Ten Countries, 24 INT'L SOC. SCI. J.

417, 458 (1972) (The Universal Declaration "has no legal effect in English law.").

²²⁴ European Convention, supra note 8.

²²⁵ Id. at art. 8(1).

²²⁶ Id. at art. 8(2).

²²⁷ See id. at art. 1.

²²⁸ See, e.g., Jaconelli, The European Convention on Human Rights -- The Text of a British Bill of Rights?, 1976 Pub. L. 226, 233-34.

²²⁹ Doc. H (67) 2, published Jan. 10, 1967. This appears to be untrue of telephone tapping. Compare Malone v. Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis (No. 2), [1979] Ch. 344, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700 (sustaining government wiretapping practices) with "Klass" Case, 2 E.H.R.R. (Eur. Ct. H.R. 1978) (finding government wiretapping a violation of Article 8).

²³⁰ See Council of Europe, Consultative Assembly, Res. 428 (Jan. 23, 1970).

²³¹ See, e.g., Attorney-General for Canada v. Attorney-General for Ontario, [1937] A.C. 326, 347 (P.C.) (opinion of Lord Atkin). Only Ireland and Iceland join the United Kingdom in failing to give even limited effect to international agreements. See Golsong, The European Convention on Human Rights Before Domestic Courts, 38 BRIT. Y.B. INT'L L. 445, 445 (1962).

²³² See, e.g., 596 PARL. DEB. H.C. (5th ser.) 333-34 (1958) (remarks of Foreign Secretary Ormsby-Gore).

²³³ See Golsong, supra note 231, at 446.

²³⁴ See R. v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, ex parte Bhajan Singh, [1976] Q.B. 198, 207, [1975] 3 W.L.R. 225, 230-31 (C.A. 1975) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.).

²³⁵ See R. v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, ex parte

Phansopkar, [1976] Q.B. 606, 626, 628, [1975] 3 All E.R. 497, 511, 512, [1975] 3 W.L.R. 322, 339, 341 (C.A. 1975) (opinion of Scarman, L.J.).

²³⁶ See R. v. Chief Immigration Officer, Heathrow Airport, ex parte Salamat Bibi, [1976] 3 All E.R. 843, 847-48, [1976] 1 W.L.R. 979, 984-85 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.).

²³⁷ See James Buchanan & Co., Ltd. v. Babco Forwarding & Shipping (U.K.) Ltd., [1977] Q.B. 208, 213, [1977] 1 All E.R. 518, 522-23, [1977] 2 W.L.R. 107, 112 (C.A. 1976) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.), aff'd on other grounds, [1978] A.C. 141, [1977] 3 All E.R. 1048, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 907 (1977).

²³⁸ See Crawford, Decisions of British Courts during 1976-1977, 48 BRIT. Y.B. INT'L L. 333, 351 (1978).

²³⁹ See, e.g., Pan-American World Airways Inc. v. Department of Trade, [1976] 1 Lloyd's L.R. 257, 261-62 (C.A.).

²⁴⁰ But see R. v. Chief Immigration Officer, Heathrow Airport, ex parte Salamat Bibi, [1976] 3 All E.R. 843, 847-48, [1976] 1 W.L.R. 979, 984-85 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.).

²⁴¹ See Firma J. Nold KG v. Commission of the European Communities, [1974] C.J. Comm. E. Rec. 491, 508, 14 Comm. Mkt. L.R. 338, 354 (judgment of Pescatore, J.) (European Convention on Human Rights incorporated into Community law); Pescatore, Fundamental Rights and Freedoms in the System of the European Communities, 18 AM. J. COMP. L. 343 (1970).

²⁴² National Panasonic (U.K.) Ltd. v. Commission of the European Communities, [1981] I.C.R. 51, [1981] 2 All E.R. 1 (E.C.J. 1980), discussed in Case Comment, 11 GA. J. INT'L & COMP. L. 177 (1981).

²⁴³ See Jaconelli, supra note 228, at 230.

²⁴⁴ See European Convention, supra note 8, Optional Protocol.

²⁴⁵ See page 38 infra.

²⁴⁶See O'Hanlon, The Guarantees Afforded by the Institutional Machinery of the Convention, in PRIVACY AND HUMAN RIGHTS, 307, 308 (A. Robertson ed. 1973); A. ROBERTSON, HUMAN RIGHTS IN EUROPE 203-12 (2d ed. 1977).

²⁴⁷See, e.g., Jaconelli, supra note 228, at 227 & n.7. Cf. Raymond v. Honey, [1982]¹ All E.R. 756, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 456 (H.L.) [access to court broadened after decision of European Court of Human Rights].

²⁴⁸See Evans, Computers and Privacy: The New Council of Europe Convention, 130 NEW L.J. 1067 (1980); Privacy -- We Don't Worry, We're British, ECONOMIST, Oct. 25, 1980, at 81.

²⁴⁹ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT, GUIDELINES ON THE PROTECTION OF PRIVACY AND TRANSBORDER FLOWS OF PERSONAL DATA 10-11 (1981).

²⁵⁰Convention for the Protection of Individuals with Regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data, adopted, Sept. 17, 1980.

²⁵¹Id. at art. 5-6, 8.

²⁵²See Gibb, Britain to Sign Treaty on Computer Data, Times, Mar. 3, 1981, at 3, col. 6; Computer Privacy -- Do You Trust the Home Office?, ECONOMIST, June 13, 1981, at 32.

²⁵³See, e.g., D. WATKINSON & M. REED, SQUATTING, TRESPASS AND CIVIL LIBERTIES 41 (1976); Hewitt, The Englishman's Front Door, 36 NEW STATESMAN 435, 435-36 (1948); Ackerman, Fact or Fancy?, 1 NOTES & QUERIES (12th ser.) 509 (1916) (doubting the legal justification of the maxim "especially since the additions to the statutes during the last decade.").

²⁵⁴See Criminal Law Act, 1967, ch. 58, § 3(1) ("A person may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances in the prevention of crime."); R. v. Barrett, unreported decision (C.A., June 23, 1980) (Defendant's honest belief that his home was his castle to defend by all necessary force was of no avail.). For the earlier view of defense of the home, see Townley v. Rushworth, 62 Knight's Local Gov't R. 95, 98 (Q.B. 1963) (opinion of Lord Parker, C.J.); Re Hussey, 18 Crim. App. 160, 161 (C.A. 1924) (opinion of Hewart, C.J.). The castle privilege against the sheriff remains. See Southam v. Smout, [1964] 1 Q.B. 308, 320, [1963] All E.R. 104, 110, [1963] 3 W.L.R. 606, 612 (C.A. 1963) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.); Swales v. Cox, [1981] Q.B. 849, 855, [1981] 1 All E.R. 1115, 1119, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 814, 822 (1980) (opinion of Donaldson, J.).

²⁵⁵ See J. GARNER, AN ENGLISHMAN'S HOME IS HIS CASTLE? 3 (1966); P. DEVLIN, supra note 55, at 18-19; HALDANE CLUB, THE LAW OF PUBLIC MEETING AND THE RIGHT OF SEARCH AND SEIZURE 23-24 (New Fabian Research Bureau No. 13, 1941); Hewitt, supra note 253, at 435-36. Early challenges to these new powers of entry were occasionally successful in court, see Stroud v. Bradbury, [1952] 2 All E.R. 76, 77 (Q.B.); or if not, see Grove v. Eastern Gas Bd., [1952] 1 K.B. 77, [1951] 2 All E.R. 1051 (C.A. 1951); at least accomplished some parliamentary retrenchment, see Rights of Entry (Gas and Electricity Boards) Act, 1954, 2 & 3 Eliz. 2, ch. 21.

²⁵⁶ See J. GARNER, supra note 255, at 20 (1966) (planning permission, compulsory purchase, inspection).

²⁵⁷ See cases cited at note 11 supra.

²⁵⁸ An explicit covenant to prevent overlooking would, of course, still be enforced. See Re Henderson's Conveyance, [1940] 1 Ch. 835, 849 (opinion of Farwell, J.).

²⁵⁹ See, e.g., Owen v. Gadd, [1956] 2 Q.B. 99, 107, [1956] 2 All E.R. 28, 31, [1956] 2 W.L.R. 945, 950 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Evershed, M.R.) (erection of scaffolding outside leased premises did not breach covenant of peaceable and quiet enjoyment); Kelly v. Battershell, [1949] 2 All

E.R. 830, 836 (C.A.) (opinion of Cohen, L.J.) (mere interference with privacy no derogation from landlord's grant to tenant); Browne v. Flower, [1911] 1 Ch. 226, 228 (opinion of Parker, J.) (dictum).

²⁶⁰ Law of Property Act, 1925, 15 & 16 Geo. 5, ch. 20, { 84(1).

²⁶¹ See, e.g., Re M. Howard (Mitcham) Ltd.'s Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 219, 222 (Lands Trib. 1956) (application to modify 1899 restrictive covenant dismissed; avoidance of invasion of privacy was of "considerable importance"); Re Munday's Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 130, 131-32 (Lands Trib. 1954) (application refused on grounds of loss of seclusion and privacy); Re Berridge's Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 125, 127 (Lands Trib. 1954) (application granted on condition to provide screen of trees for garden privacy); Re Sloggetts (Properties), Ltd.'s Application, 7 Plan. & Comp. 78, 83 (Lands Trib. 1952) (application refused on grounds of injury to privacy and amenities of surrounding property). The volume of Lands Tribunal cases decided since the mid-1950's on this ground is too large to catalogue, see LEXIS, ENGLOC library, but more recently assertions of "rights of privacy" in this context can be found. See, e.g., Re Davies's Application, 25 P. & C.R. 115, 119 (Lands Trib. 1971).

²⁶² See, e.g., Webb v. Minister of Hous. & Local Gov't, [1965] 2 All E.R. 193, 202, [1965] 1 W.L.R. 755, 773 (C.A.) (compulsory purchase order for construction of sea wall quashed; public promenade an improper purpose).

²⁶³ See, e.g., Wakelin v. Secretary of State for the Environment, 77 Knight's Local Gov't R. 101 (C.A. 1978) (upholding refusal to grant planning permission based on privacy considerations). But see Chelmsford Corp. v. Secretary of State for the Environment, 70 Knight's Local Gov't R. 89, 95 (Q.B. 1971) (opinion of Browne, J.) (planning permission imposing conditions relating to walls and fences for privacy and decoration held ultra vires).

²⁶⁴[1978] Q.B. 479, [1977] 2 All E.R. 902, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 136 (1977).

²⁶⁵[1978] Q.B. at 484, [1977] 2 All E.R. at 904, [1977] 3 W.L.R. at 138.

²⁶⁶[1978] Q.B. at 489, [1977] 2 All E.R. at 909, [1977] 3 W.L.R. at 143. On a smaller scale, habitual "peeping Toms" are still dealt with by the criminal law. See R. v. Dyson, Times, Apr. 10, 1979, at 3, col. 5, (Barnsley Magis. Ct., Apr. 9, 1979).

²⁶⁷[1977] Q.B. 966, [1977] 3 All E.R. 338, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 20 (C.A.).

²⁶⁸[1977] Q.B. at 981, [1977] 3 All E.R. at 345, [1977] 3 W.L.R. at 30.

²⁶⁹Great Central Ry. Co. v. Bates, [1921] 3 K.B. 578, 581 (C.A.) (opinion of Atkin, L.J.) (constable entered warehouse as a trespasser, no liability for his injury in a fall).

²⁷⁰[1970] 1 Q.B. 693, 708, [1969] 3 All E.R. 1700, 1705, [1969] 3 W.L.R. 1158, 1168 (C.A. 1969). See also Chic Fashions (West Wales) Ltd. v. Jones, [1968] 2 Q.B. 299, 307-08, [1968] 1 All E.R. 229, 233, [1968] 2 W.L.R. 201, 205 (C.A. 1967) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.) (applying the maxim "every man's house is his castle").

²⁷¹See, e.g., R. v. Thornley, 72 Crim. App. 302, 304 (C.A. 1980) (opinion of Dunn, L.J.) (license to enter premises granted by wife and not revoked by husband); Frank Truman Export Ltd. v. Metropolitan Police Comm'r, [1977] Q.B. 952, 964, [1977] 3 All E.R. 431, 441, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 257, 268 (1976) (opinion of Swanwick, J.) (documents held under search warrant for suspicion of fraud held privileged and returned).

²⁷²See, e.g., R. v. Adams, [1980] 1 Q.B. 575, 579-80, 583, [1980] 1 All E.R. 473, 476, 478, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 275, 279, 281 (C.A. 1979)

(interpreting Obscene Publications Act, 1959, 7 & 8 Eliz. 2, ch. 56, { 2); Clowser v. Chaplin, 72 Crim. App. 342, 353 (Q.B. 1981) (interpreting Road Traffic Act, 1972, ch. 20, { 8); Congreve v. Home Office, [1976] Q.B. 629, 649, [1976] 1 All E.R. 697, 708, [1976] 2 W.L.R. 291, 305 (C.A. 1975) (television licenses); R. v. Surrey Quarter Sessions Comm., ex parte Tweedie, 61 Knight's Local Gov't R. 464, 467 (Q.B. 1963) (interpreting Education Act, 1944, 7 & 8 Geo. 6, ch. 31, {{ 36, 37). See also Hutton v. Esher Urban Dist. Council, [1972] Ch. 515, 523-24, [1972] 3 All E.R. 504, 511, [1972] 3 W.L.R. 62, 70 (opinion of Megarry, J.), rev'd, [1974] Ch. 167, [1973] 2 All E.R. 1123, [1973] 2 W.L.R. 917 (C.A. 1973). Cf. Stott v. Hefferon, [1974] 3 All E.R. 673, 676, [1974] 1 W.L.R. 1270, 1273-74 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Widgery, C.J.) (limiting the presumption; Parliament intends that premises only be protected if actually inhabited).

²⁷³*Clowser v. Chaplin*, 72 Crim. App. 342, 353 (Q.B. 1981) (opinion of Donaldson, L.J.).

²⁷⁴[1980] A.C. 952, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1 (1979).

²⁷⁵*R. v. Inland Revenue Comm'rs, ex parte Rossminster*, [1980] A.C. 952, [1979] 3 All E.R. 385, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1 (C.A. 1979).

²⁷⁶[1980] A.C. at 997, 1019, 1022, [1980] 1 All E.R. at 82, 99, 101, [1980] 2 W.L.R. at 36, 56, 59.

²⁷⁷[1981] A.C. 446, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283 (1980).

²⁷⁸[1981] A.C. at 462, 464-65, 465, [1980] 2 All E.R. at 762, 763, 764, [1980] 3 W.L.R. at 294, 296-97, 298.

²⁷⁹*Inland Revenue Comm'rs v. Rossminster Ltd.*, [1980] A.C. 952, 997, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, 82, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1, 36 (1979) (opinion of Lord Wilberforce).

²⁸⁰So named from the leading case. See Anton Piller KG v.

Manufacturing Processes Ltd., [1976] Ch. 55, [1976] 1 All E.R. 779, [1976] 2 W.L.R. 162 (C.A. 1975).

²⁸¹ See East India Co. v. Kynaston, 3 Bli. 153, 163-64, 4 Eng. Rep. 561, 564 (Ch. 1821) (opinion of Lord Redesdale, V.C.).

²⁸² EMI Ltd. v. Pandit, [1975] 1 All E.R. 418, 421, [1975] 1 W.L.R. 302, 305 (Ch. 1974) (opinion of Templeman, J.)

²⁸³ Thermax v. Schott Indus. Glass Ltd., 7 Fleet St. R. 289, 298 (Ch. 1980); Yousif v. Salama, [1980] 3 All E.R. 405, 408, [1980] 1 W.L.R. 1540, 1544 (C.A.) (Donaldson, L.J., dissenting).

²⁸⁴ Thermax v. Schott Indus. Glass Ltd., 7 Fleet St. R. 289, 298 (Ch. 1980) (opinion of Browne-Wilkinson, J.). See also ITC Film Distribs. Ltd. v. Video Exch. Ltd., Times, June 17, 1982 (C. A., June 15, 1982) (opinion of Slade, L. J.) (quoting this passage).

²⁸⁵ See, e.g., THE INTERCEPTION OF COMMUNICATIONS IN GREAT BRITAIN, supra note 190; BIRKETT COMMITTEE, supra note 163; Duffy & Muchlinski, The Interception of Communications in Great Britain, 130 NEW L.J. 999 (1980); Nathan, Eavesdropping (pts. 1-3), 225 LAW TIMES 119, 135, 149 (1958); Wade, Post-Office -- Interception of Messages, 16 C.A.M.B. L.J. 6 (1958).

²⁸⁶ R. v. Blackburn, Times, June 6, 1974, at 4, col. 3 (Leeds Crown Ct., June 5, 1974) (telephone tapping) (judgment of Nield, J.) ("[W]hatever the legal technicalities, this offence constituted a very serious invasion of privacy."), cited in Director of Pub. Prosecutions v. Withers, [1975] A.C. 842, 866, [1974] 3 All E.R. 984, 999, [1974] 3 W.L.R. 751, 766 (1974) (opinion of Lord Simon of Glaisdale); R. v. Withers, Times, June 17, 1971, at 1, col. 2 (Cent. Crim. Ct., June 16, 1971) (bugging of bedroom for divorce evidence was conspiracy to commit trespass) (judgment of Roskill, J.) ("serious breaches of a citizen's right to privacy in his own home"); R. v. Sergeant, Times, Aug. 11, 1967, at 3, col. 1 (Newbury Magis. Ct., Aug. 10, 1967) (bugging to obtain industrial secrets). The medieval criminal offense of eavesdropping was judicially disapproved, see R. v. London Quarter Sessions [1948] 1 K.B. 670, 675, [1948] 1 All E.R. 72, 75 (1947) (opinion of Lord Goddard, C.J.), and was abolished in 1967, see Criminal Law Act, 1967, ch. 58, § 13(a)(1).

²⁸⁷Sheen v. Clegg, Daily Telegraph, June 22, 1961.

²⁸⁸R. v. Robson, [1972] 2 All E.R. 669, [1972] 1 W.L.R. 651 (Cent. Crim. Ct.); R. v. Senat, 52 Crim. App. 282, 286-87 (C.A. 1968); Gabbitas v. Gabbitas, Times, Dec. 5, 1967, at 3, col. 1 (P., Dec. 5, 1967) (evidence obtained by bugging wife's bedroom); Trehearne v. Trehearne, Times, Oct. 18, 1966, at 9, col. 1 (P., Oct. 17, 1966) (opinion of Cairns, J.) (evidence obtained by bugging husband's bedroom, though "a disgraceful invasion of privacy," was admitted); R. v. Maqsd Ali, [1966] 1 Q.B. 688, 702, [1965] 2 All E.R. 464, 469, [1965] 3 W.L.R. 229, 240 (1965) (opinion of Marshall, J.) ("The method of the informer and of the eavesdropper is commonly used in the detection of crime."); R. v. Mills, [1962] 3 All E.R. 298, 302, [1962] 1 W.L.R. 1152, 1157 (Q.B.) (opinion of Winn, J.). Intercepted letters appear to have been offered in evidence at criminal trials very rarely. See, e.g., R. v. O'Brien, Times, July 5, 1923, at 11, col. 4 (Cent. Crim. Ct., July 4, 1923) (Irish seditious conspiracy trial); R. v. Atterbury (Bishop), 16 Howell St. Tr. 323, 332-35 (Parl. 1723) (treasonable conspiracy).

²⁸⁹[1979] Ch. 344, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700. The "inalienable human right" to privacy was early invoked against wiretapping in Nathan, supra note 285, at 120.

²⁹⁰[1979] Ch. at 372, [1979] 2 All E.R. at 642, [1979] 2 W.L.R. at 725 ("[T]here has to be a first time for everything").

²⁹¹See [1979] Ch. at 380, [1979] 2 All E.R. at 638, [1979] 2 W.L.R.

at 732-33; Wacks, supra note 23, at 74 n.8. The plaintiff has indeed sought this relief. See Times, July 27, 1981, at 3, col. 3; id., Nov. 5, 1980, at 6, col. 1.

²⁹²The privacy basis of the husband-wife privilege was eroded in Rumping v. Director of Pub. Prosecutions, [1964] A.C. 814, 832, [1962] 3 All E.R. 256, 258, [1962] 3 W.L.R. 763, 772 (1962) (opinion of Lord Reid) (no privilege against "disclosure by a witness who was an eavesdropper or who had intercepted or stolen a letter from one spouse to the other").

²⁹³[1977] Q.B. 881, 895, 896, [1977] 3 All E.R. 677, 687, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 63, 74, 75 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.).

²⁹⁴See id.; Medway v. Doublelock Ltd., [1978] 1 All E.R. 1261, 1264, [1978] 1 W.L.R. 710, 713 (Ch. 1977) (quoting this passage).

²⁹⁵See Church of Scientology of Cal. v. Department of Health and Soc. Security, [1979] 3 All E.R. 97, 101, [1979] 1 W.L.R. 723, 728 (C.A. 1979) (opinion of Stephenson, L.J.); Halcon Int'l Inc. v. Shell Transp. & Trading Co., [1979] Pat. Cas. 97, 107 (Ch. 1978) (opinion of Whitford, J.).

²⁹⁶[1982] 1 All E.R. 532, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338 (H.L.).

²⁹⁷*Home Office v. Harman*, [1981] Q.B. 534, 557, 558, [1981] 2 All E.R. 349, 363, 364, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 310, 328, 329-30 (C.A.).

²⁹⁸[1982] 1 All E.R. at 550, [1982] 2 W.L.R. at 361, (opinion of Lord Roskill). See also [1982] 1 All E.R. at 543, 548, [1982] 2 W.L.R. at 351, 358, (Lord Scarman, dissenting).

²⁹⁹*Re F (a minor)*, [1977] Fam. 58, 98, [1977] 1 All E.R. 114, 129, [1976], 3 W.L.R. 813, 832 (C.A. 1976) (opinion of Scarman, L.J.); Re X (a minor), [1975] Fam. 47, 58, [1975] 1 All E.R. 697, 704, [1975] 2 W.L.R. 335, 343 (C.A. 1974) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.). See also Barritt v. Attorney-General, [1971] 3 All E.R. 1183, 1184, [1971] 1

W.L.R. 1713, 1714 (P. 1969) (in exercising discretion to proceed in camera, courts weigh effect of publicity and disclosure of family secrets). The origin of the protection afforded private and domestic affairs in wardship proceedings is Scott v. Scott, [1913] A.C. 417, 482-83 (opinion of Lord Shaw of Dumferline).

³⁰⁰*Re X (a minor)*, [1975] Fam. 47, 58, [1975] 1 All E.R. 697, 704, [1975] 2 W.L.R. 335, 343 (C.A. 1974) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.).

³⁰¹2 De G. & Sm. 652, 64 Eng. Rep. 293 (Ch. 1848), aff'd, 1 Mac. & G. 25, 41 Eng. Rep. 1171, 1 H. & Tw. 1, 47 Eng. Rep. 1302 (Ch. 1849).

³⁰²*Morison v. Moat*, 9 Hare 241, 68 Eng. Rep. 492 (Ch. 1851), aff'd, 21 L.J. Ch. (n.s.) 248 (1852) (injunction to restrain former partner from making medicine by secret method); Yovatt v. Winyard, 1 J. & W. 394, 37 Eng. Rep. 425 (Ch. 1820) (injunction to restrain journeyman from disclosing recipes of medicines on grounds of breach of trust and confidence).

³⁰³See G. DWORKIN, CONFIDENCE IN THE LAW (1971); Jones, Restitution of Benefits Obtained in Breach of Another's Confidence, 86 LAW Q. REV. 463 (1970); North, Breach of Confidence: Is There a New Tort?, 12 J. SOC'Y PUB. TEACHERS L. 149 (1972).

³⁰⁴*Woodward v. Hutchins*, [1977] 2 All E.R. 751, 755, [1977] 1 W.L.R. 760, 764 (C.A.) (opinion of Bridge, L.J.).

³⁰⁵*Schering Chemicals Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd.*, [1981] 2 All E.R. 321, 333, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 848, 864 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R., dissenting in part).

³⁰⁶See, e.g., Coco v. A.N. Clark (Engineers) Ltd., [1969] Pat. Cas. 41, 50 (Ch. 1968) (opinion of Megarry, J.); Fraser v. Evans, [1969] 1 Q.B. 349, 361, [1969] 1 All E.R. 8, 10-11, [1968] 3 W.L.R. 1172, 1178 (C.A. 1968).

³⁰⁷*Saltman Eng'g Co. Ltd. v. Campbell Eng'g Co., Ltd.*, 65 Pat. Cas.

203, 213, [1963] 3 All E.R. 413, 414 (C.A. 1948) (opinion of Lord Greene, M.R.) ("[T]he obligation to respect confidence is not limited to cases where the parties are in contractual relationship. . . . If a defendant is proved to have used confidential information, directly or indirectly obtained from a plaintiff, without the consent, express or implied of the plaintiff, he will be guilty of an infringement of the plaintiff's rights.").

³⁰⁸Argyll v. Argyll, [1967] Ch. 302, [1965] 1 All E.R. 611, [1965] 2 W.L.R. 790 (1964), discussed in Cline, The Argyll Decision, 213 SPECTATOR 837 (1964) ("a decisive step towards a new law of privacy").

³⁰⁹[1967] Ch. at 320, [1965] 1 All E.R. at 618, [1965] 2 W.L.R. at 799 (quoting Albert v. Strange, 1 Mac. & G. 25, 47, 41 Eng. Rep. 1171, 1179, 1 H. & W. 1, 25, 47 Eng. Rep. 1302, 1312 (Ch. 1849) (opinion of Lord Cottenham)).

³¹⁰See, e.g., COMPUTERS: SAFEGUARDS FOR PRIVACY (Cmd. 6354, 1975); LINDOP COMMITTEE, supra note 197; PRIVACY, COMPUTERS AND YOU (B. Rowe ed. 1972); J. RULE, PRIVATE LIVES AND PUBLIC SURVEILLANCE (1973); P. SIEGHART, PRIVACY AND COMPUTERS (1976); Computers and Privacy, 128 NEW L.J. 423 (1978).

³¹¹*Dyson v. Attorney-General*, [1911] 1 K.B. 410, 421 (C.A. 1910) (opinion of Farwell, C.J.). See also a related case of the same name, [1912] 1 Ch. 158 (C.A. 1911). The same fear had been expressed in The Census, supra note 139, at 424.

³¹²*Turner v. Midgely*, [1967] 3 All E.R. 601, 604, [1967] 1 W.L.R. 1247, 1252 (Q.B.) (opinion of Lord Parker, C.J.); Willcock v. Muckle, [1951] 2 K.B. 844, [1951] 2 All E.R. 367. See also Vivian, Identity Cards and Liberty, 127 NAT'L REV. 143 (1946).

³¹³*Director of Pub. Prosecutions v. Withers*, [1975] A.C. 842, 863, [1974] 3 All E.R. 984, 995, [1974] 3 W.L.R. 751, 762 (1974) (opinion of Lord Simon).

³¹⁴ Clinch v. Inland Revenue Comm'rs, [1974] Q.B. 76, 87, [1973] 1 All E.R. 977, 985, [1973] 2 W.L.R. 862, 869 (1973) (opinion of Ackner, J.).

³¹⁵ More is expected of Parliament and the European Community. See pages 27, 32-33 supra.

³¹⁶ Starr v. National Coal Bd., [1977] 1 All E.R. 243, 254, [1977] 1 W.L.R. 63, 75 (C.A. 1976) (opinion of Geoffrey Lane, L.J.).

³¹⁷ Lindley v. Rutter, [1981] Q.B. 128, 134, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 660, 665 (1980) (opinion of Donaldson, L.J.).

³¹⁸ S. v. S., [1972] A.C. 24, 57, [1970] 3 All E.R. 107, 123, [1970] 3 W.L.R. 366, 386-87 (1970) (opinion of Lord Hodson) (quoting Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J. Misc. 633, 652, 16 A.2d 80, 90 (Ch. 1940)).

³¹⁹ See page 39 supra.

³²⁰ M. v. M. (No. 1), [1967] P. 313, 315, [1967] 1 All E.R. 870, 871, [1967] 2 W.L.R. 1333, 1335 (opinion of Sir Jocelyn Simon, P.); Edwards v. Edwards, [1967] 2 All E.R. 1032, 1033, [1968] 1 W.L.R. 149, 149 (P. 1967) (opinion of Sir Jocelyn Simon, P.).

³²¹ See pages 38-39 supra.

³²² See W. v. W., Times, Mar. 21, 1981, at 6, col. 6, (Fam., Mar. 18, 1981) (opinion of Balcombe, J.); Morgan v. Morgan, [1977] Fam. 122, 123, 125, [1977] 2 All E.R. 515, 516, [1977] 2 W.L.R. 712, 713, 715 (1976) (opinion of Watkins, J.).

³²³ Science Research Council v. Nasse, [1980] A.C. 1028, 1085, [1979] 3 All E.R. 673, 695, [1979] 3 W.L.R. 762, 788 (1979) (opinion of Lord Fraser of Tullybelton) (reversing the Court of Appeal's automatic refusal to order disclosure and remitting the issue to the trial court)."

³²⁴ R. v. Crown Court at Sheffield, ex parte Brownlow, [1980] 1 Q.B.

530, 542, [1980] 2 All E.R. 444, 453, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 892, 900 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.). But see R.v. Mason, [1981] Q.B. 881, [1980] 3 All E. R. 777, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 617 (C.A. 1980) (condoning the practice).

³²⁵R. v. Grossman, 73 Crim. App. 302, 308, 309 (C.A. 1981).

³²⁶[1931] A.C. 333, [1931] All E.R. 131. The case was interpreted variously by American commentators. See, e.g., Green, The Right of Privacy, 27 ILL. L. REV. 237, 294 n.23 (1932) (the theory of the case would give recovery in libel for the invasion of privacy claim in Roberson v. Rochester Folding Box Co., 171 N.Y. 538, 64 N.E. 442 (1902)); Recent Decisions, 32 MICH. L. REV. 1172, 1172 n.5 (1934) (the decision "seemingly recogniz[es] the right of privacy in England"); Recent Cases, 16 MINN. L. REV. 220, 221 (1932) (the case "somewhat extend[s] the action for libel to accomplish the result . . . of the right of privacy").

³²⁷See, e.g., Briant v. Prudential Assurance Co. Ltd., [1976] 1 Lloyd's L.R. 533, 534 (C.A. 1975); Byrne v. Kinematograph Renters Soc'y Ltd., [1958] 2 All E.R. 579, 581, [1958] 1 W.L.R. 762, 777 (Ch.).

³²⁸See, e.g., Williams v. Settle, [1960] 2 All E.R. 806, 812, [1960] 1 W.L.R. 1072, 1082 (C.A.) (opinion of Sellers, J.) (publication of wedding picture after bride's father was murdered constituted a violation of copyright an "intrusion into his life, deeper and graver than an intrusion into a man's property"), discussed in Cline, Invasion of Privacy, 204 SPECTATOR 880 (1960) ("[T]he court was in effect punishing the defendant for an unscrupulous invasion of the plaintiff's privacy."); Webb v. Times Publishing Co., [1960] 2 Q.B. 535, 569, [1960] 2 All E.R. 789, 805, [1960] 3 W.L.R. 352, 371 (opinion of Pearson, J.) (defamatory article not fair comment or privileged if it appeals to "an interest which is due to idle curiosity or a desire for gossip"); Plumb

v. Jeyes' Sanitary Compounds Co., Ltd., Times, Apr. 15, 1937, at 4, col. 4 (K.B., Apr. 14, 1937) (jury award for unauthorized publication of photograph). See also Moore v. News of the World, [1972] 1 Q.B. 441, [1972] 1 All E.R. 915, [1972] 2 W.L.R. 419 (C.A.) (false attribution of authorship in fictitious "interview" about private life). See generally R. O'SULLIVAN & R. BROWN, THE LAW OF DEFAMATION 11-12 (1958) (once defamation is established, jury may take into consideration invasion of privacy). For a remarkable case, holding that a legal periodical's opinion about the criminality of a particular reporter's invasive tactic was not libelous, see Lea v. Justice of the Peace Ltd., Times, Mar. 15, 1947, at 2, col. 7 (K.B., Mar. 14, 1947) (opinion of Hilbery, J.) ("It could not be too strongly emphasized that in this country the Press has no right to go on private property and intrude into people's lives."); H. HYDE, PRIVACY AND THE PRESS (1947).

³²⁹[1981] A.C. 1096, [1981] 1 All E.R. 417, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774 (H.L. 1980).

³³⁰[1981] A.C. at 1129-30, [1981] 1 All E.R. at 441, [1980] 3 W.L.R. at 804-05 (C.A. 1980) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.); [1981] A.C. at 1189, [1981] 1 All E.R. at 461, [1981] 3 W.L.R. at 841 (opinion of Lord Salmon quoting this passage in part).

³³¹See cases cited in note 11 supra.

³³²Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd., [1980] A.C. 952, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1 (1979).

³³³Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283 (1980).

³³⁴Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338 (H.L.).

³³⁵R. v. Thornley, 72 Crim. App. 302 (C.A. 1980); R. v. Adams, [1980] 1 Q.B. 575, [1980] 1 All E.R. 473, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 275 (C.A.).

1979).

³³⁶Schering Chems. Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., [1981] 2 All E.R. 321, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 848 (C.A.).

³³⁷R. v. Crown Court at Sheffield, ex parte Brownlow, [1980] Q.B. 530, [1980] 2 All E.R. 444, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 892 (C.A. 1980).

³³⁸R. v. Grossman, 73 Crim. App. 302 (C.A. 1981).

³³⁹Thermax Ltd. v. Schott Indus. Glass Ltd., 7 Fleet St. 289 (Ch. 1980).

³⁴⁰Lindley v. Rutter, [1981] Q.B. 128, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 660 (1980).

³⁴¹British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd., [1981] A.C. 1096, [1981] 1 All E.R. 417, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774 (1980).

³⁴²See pages 34-43 supra.

³⁴³See, e.g., Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, 550, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338, 361 (H.L.) (opinion of Lord Roskill); Lindley v. Rutter, [1981] Q.B. 128, 134, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 660 (1980) (opinion of Donaldson, L.J.).

³⁴⁴Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd., [1980] A.C. 952, 997, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, 82, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1, 36, (1979) (opinion of Lord Wilberforce).

³⁴⁵[1980] A.C. at 1021, [1980] 1 All E.R. at 101, [1980] 2 W.L.R. at 59 (1979) (opinion of Lord Scarman).

³⁴⁶Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, 465, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, 764, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283, 297 (1980) (opinion of Lord Scarman).

³⁴⁷Riddick v. Thames Board Mills, [1977] Q.B. 881, 895, 896, [1977] 3 All E.R. 677, 687, [1977] 3 W.L.R. 63, 74, 75 (C.A.) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.), paraphrased in Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, 540, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338, 349 (H.L.) (opinion of Lord Keith of Kinkel).

³⁴⁸Schering Chems. Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., [1981] 2 All E.R. 321, 333,

[1981] 2 W.L.R. 848, 864 (C.A.) (Lord Denning, M.R., dissenting in part).

³⁴⁹The same can be said of the American development. See Note, supra note 13.

³⁵⁰Albert (Prince) v. Strange, 2 De G. & Sm. 652, 64 Eng. Rep. 293 (Ch. 1848), aff'd, 1 Mac. & G. 25, 41 Eng. Rep. 1171, 1 H. & Tw. 1, 47 Eng. Rep. 1302 (Ch. 1849).

³⁵¹Schering Chems. Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., [1981] 2 All E.R. 321, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 848 (C.A.).

³⁵²British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd., [1981] A.C. 1096, [1981] 1 All E.R. 417, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774 (1980).

³⁵³Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338 (H.L.).

³⁵⁴Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283 (1980).

³⁵⁵R. v. Adams, [1980] 1 Q.B. 575, [1980] 1 All E.R. 473, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 275 (C.A. 1979).

³⁵⁶Lindley v. Rutter, [1981] Q.B. 128, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 660 (1980).

³⁵⁷Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd., [1980] A.C. 952, 997, 1019, 1022, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, 82, 99, 101, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1, 36, 56, 59 (1979) (opinions of Lord Wilberforce & Lord Scarman, & of Lord Salmon, dissenting).

³⁵⁸Malone v. Commissioners of Police of the Metropolis (No. 2), [1979] Ch. 344, 358-59, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, 632, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700, 713 (citing Katz v. United States, 389 U.S. 347 (1967); Rhodes v. Graham, 238 Ky. 225, 37 S.W.2d 46 (1931)).

³⁵⁹British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd., [1981] A.C. 1096, [1981] 1 All E.R. 417, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774 (1980).

³⁶⁰S. v. S., [1972] A.C. 24, 57, [1970] 3 All E.R. 107, 123, [1970]

3 W.L.R. 366, 386-87 (1970) (opinion of Lord Hodson) (quoting Bednarik v. Bednarik, 18 N.J. Misc. 633, 652, 16 A.2d 80, 90 (Ch. 1940)).

³⁶¹ Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, 548, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338, 358 (H.L.) (Lord Scarman, dissenting).

³⁶² See pages 30-32 & note 8 supra.

³⁶³ Malone v. Commissioners of Police of the Metropolis (No. 2), [1979] Ch. 344, 354, [1979] 2 All E.R. 620, 628-29, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 700, 709 (opinion of Megarry, V.C.).

³⁶⁴ Schering Chems. Ltd. v. Falkman Ltd., [1981] 2 All E.R. 321, 333, [1981] 2 W.L.R. 848, 864 (C.A.) (Lord Denning, M.R., dissenting in part).

³⁶⁵ Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, 464-65, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, 763, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283, 296-97 (1980) (opinion of Lord Scarman).

³⁶⁶ Id.

³⁶⁷ See page 32 supra.

³⁶⁸ Harman v. Secretary of State for the Home Dep't, [1982] 1 All E.R. 532, 548, [1982] 2 W.L.R. 338, 358 (H.L.) (Lord Scarman, dissenting).

³⁶⁹ See Ghani v. Jones, [1970] 1 Q.B. 693, 708, [1969] 3 All E.R. 1700, 1705, [1969] 3 W.L.R. 1158, 1168 (C.A. 1969) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.) (citing Entick v. Carrington, 19 Howell St. Tr. 1029, 2 Wils. K.B. 275, 95 Eng. Rep. 807 (C.P. 1765); Morris v. Beardmore, [1981] A.C. 446, 464-65, [1980] 2 All E.R. 753, 763, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 283, 296-97 (1980) (citing same). But see Inland Revenue Commissioners v. Rossminster Ltd., [1980] A.C. 952, 997, [1980] 1 All E.R. 80, 82, [1980] 2 W.L.R. 1, 36 (1979) (opinion of Lord Wilberforce) (distinguishing the 18th century cases).

³⁷⁰ See Argyll v. Argyll, [1967] Ch. 302, 320, [1965] 1 All E.R. 611,

618, [1965] 2 W.L.R. 790, 799 (1964) (quoting Albert v. Strange, 1 Mac. & G. 25, 47, 41 Eng. Rep. 1171, 1179, 1 H. & W. 1, 25, 47 Eng. Rep. 1302, 1312 (Ch. 1849) (opinion of Lord Cottenham)); British Steel Corp. v. Granada Television Ltd., [1981] A.C. 1096, 1129-30, [1981] 1 All E.R. 417, 441, [1980] 3 W.L.R. 774, 804-05 (C.A. 1980) (opinion of Lord Denning, M.R.) (citing same).

³⁷¹ See, e.g., Thermax Ltd. v. Schott Indus. Glass Ltd., 7 Fleet St. 289, 298 (Ch. 1980) (opinion of Browne-Wilkinson, J.) (citing the maxim).

³⁷² See, e.g., Minister of Home Affairs v. Fisher, [1980] A.C. 319, [1979] 3 All E.R. 21, [1979] 2 W.L.R. 889 (P.C. 1979) (Bermuda); Hinds v. The Queen, [1976] 1 All E.R. 353, [1976] 2 W.L.R. 366 (P.C. 1975) (Jamaica); Francis v. Chief of Police, [1973] A.C. 761, [1973] 2 All E.R. 251, [1973] 2 W.L.R. 505 (P.C.) (St. Christopher, Nevis & Anguila); Akar v. Attorney-General of Sierra Leone, [1970] A.C. 853, [1969] 3 All E.R. 384, [1969] 3 W.L.R. 970 (P.C. 1969).

³⁷³ See, e.g., 2 D. WALKER, THE LAW OF DELICT IN SCOTLAND 708-12 (1966); Kilbrandon, The Law of Privacy in Scotland, 2 CAMBRIAN L. REV. 35 (1971); Middleton, A Right to Privacy?, 8 JURID. REV. (n.s.) 178 (1963).

³⁷⁴ See cases cited in 2 D. WALKER, supra note 373, at 711.

³⁷⁵ See Raffaelli v. Heatly, 1949 Scot. L.T. 284, 285-86 (H.C.J.).

³⁷⁶ See Robertson v. Keith, 1936 Sess. Cas. 29, 48 (Scot.) (opinion of Aitchison, L.J.C.).

³⁷⁷ See Cadell v. Davies, Mor. Literary Property, App. pt. 1, no. 4 (Scot. 1864); 1 G. BELL, COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF SCOTLAND 111-12 (1st ed. Edinburgh 1804) (7th ed. 1870). Cf. Caird v. Sime, 12 App. Cas. 326, 343 (H.L. (Sc.) 1887) (opinion of Lord Watson) (lecturer retains right of property in spoken lecture).

³⁷⁸A.B. v. C.D., 14 D. 177, 180 (Scot. Sess. 1851) (opinion of Lord Fullerton).

³⁷⁹Friend v. Skelton, 17 D. 548, 555 n.* (Scot. Sess. 1855) (opinion of Lord Deas). See also Sheriff v. Wilson, 17 D. 528, 530 (Scot. Sess. 1855) (opinion of Hope, L.J.C.) (effect of press ridicule on plaintiff's feelings).

³⁸⁰Cunningham v. Phillips, 6 M. 926, 928 (Scot. Sess. 1868) (Lord Deas, dissenting).

³⁸¹6 M. at 929.

³⁸²John Leng & Co. Ltd. v. Langlands, 114 L.T. (n.s.) 665, 668 (H.L. (Sc.) 1916) (opinion of Viscount Haldane, L.C.).

³⁸³See, e.g., 2 D. WALKER, supra note 373, at 708.

³⁸⁴See, e.g., ASPECTS OF PRIVACY LAW, supra note 5; Burns, supra note 5. For an early complaint against government intrusion into the home, seizure of papers, and interception of letters, see S. WILCOCKE, A LETTER TO THE SOLICITOR GENERAL ON THE SEIZURE OF PAPERS 12-14 (Montreal 1821) ("[T]here are secrets which, though I would rather have died than have discovered, . . . secrets of thought and of conduct such as not any man has a right to look upon, and . . . no color of law has a right to expose.") (emphasis omitted).

³⁸⁵See Robbins v. C.B.C., 12 D.L.R.2d 35, 42 (Quebec Super. Ct. 1957).

³⁸⁶See Krouse v. Chrysler Canada Ltd., 12 D.L.R.3d 463, 464 (Ont. High Ct. 1970) (opinion of Parker, J.) (refusing motion to dismiss), decided on alternate grounds, 25 D.L.R.3d 49, 56 (Ont. High Ct. 1972), rev'd, 1 Ont. 2d (C.A. 1974); Burnett v. The Queen in Right of Canada, 23 Ont.2d 109, 115 (High Ct. 1979) (opinion of O'Driscoll, J.).

³⁸⁷See Motherwell v. Motherwell, 73 D.L.R.3d 62, 78 (Alta. Sup. Ct. 1976) (opinion of Clement, J.A.) (privacy in context of private nuisance).

³⁸⁸ See British Columbia Privacy Act, 1968 B.C. Stat., ch. 39. A "common law right to privacy" was also incorporated into the British Columbia Landlord and Tenant Act, 1960 B.C. REV. STAT., ch. 207, { 46, by Re MacIsaac, 25 D.L.R.3d 610 (B.C. Prov. Ct. 1972) (opinion of Levy, C.J.).

³⁸⁹ See Manitoba Privacy Act, 1970 Man. Stat., ch. 74.

³⁹⁰ See Saskatchewan Privacy Act, 1974 Sask. Stat., ch. 80.

³⁹¹ See, e.g., Davis v. McArthur, 17 D.L.R.3d 760 (B.C. C.A. 1971).

³⁹² 1973-1974 Can. Stat., ch. 50. See generally D. WATT, LAW OF ELECTRONIC SURVEILLANCE IN CANADA (1979).

³⁹³ Protection of Privacy Act, {{ 178.13, 178.16.

³⁹⁴ Id. at { 178.21.

³⁹⁵ Burns, supra note 5, at 64.

³⁹⁶ Victoria Park Racing & Recreation Grounds Co. Ltd. v. Taylor, 58 C.L.R. 479, 495-96 (Austl. 1937) (opinion of Latham, C.J.) ("[N]o authority was cited which shows that any general right of privacy exists.").

³⁹⁷ See, e.g., McIsaacs v. Robertson, 3 N.S.W.S. Ct. R. 51, 54 (1864) (opinion of Stephen, C.J.).

³⁹⁸ See Haisman v. Smelcher, [1953] Vict. L.R. 625, 628 (opinion of Barry, J.).

³⁹⁹ Grieg v. Grieg, [1966] Vict. R. 379, 381 (opinion of Gillard, J.).

⁴⁰⁰ R. v. Padman, 36 F.L.R. 347, 352 (Tasm. 1979) (opinion of Crawford, J.).

⁴⁰¹ AUSTRALIAN LAW REFORM COMMISSION, UNFAIR PUBLICATION: DEFAMATION AND PRIVACY 130 (No. 11, 1979).

⁴⁰² AUSTRALIAN LAW REFORM COMMISSION, PRIVACY AND INTRUSIONS 96

(Discussion Paper No. 13, 1980).

⁴⁰³ AUSTRALIAN LAW REFORM COMMISSION, PRIVACY AND PERSONAL INFORMATION 122 (Discussion Paper No. 14, 1980).

⁴⁰⁴ See, e.g., Queensland Invasion of Privacy Act, 1971; New South Wales Listening Devices Act, 1969; Victoria Listening Devices Act, 1969.

⁴⁰⁵ See Kirby, The Computer, the Individual, and the Law, 55 AUSTL. L.J. 443 (1981).

⁴⁰⁶ See, e.g., D. McQUOID-MASON, THE LAW OF PRIVACY IN SOUTH AFRICA 86-90 (1978).

⁴⁰⁷ See, e.g., Epstein v. Epstein, 1906 T.H. 87, 88 (Witwatersrand High Ct.) (opinion of Wessels, J.).

⁴⁰⁸ See Mhlongo v. Bailey, 1958 (1) S. Afr. 370, 373 (Witwatersrand Local Div. 1957) (opinion of Kuper, J.) ("[A]n invasion of the plaintiff's privacy" by the publication of a photograph "constituted an aggression upon his dignitas."); Kidson v. South Afr. Assoc. Newspapers Ltd., 1957 (3) S. Afr. 461, 467-68 (Witwatersrand Local Div.) (opinion of Kuper, J.) (publication of photograph with misleading article infringed "the right of the plaintiff to personal privacy"); O'Keefe v. Argus Printing & Publishing Co. Ltd., 1954 (3) S. Afr. 244, 249 (Cape Provincial Div.) (opinion of Watermeyer, A.J.) (invasion of privacy by newspaper photograph constitutes an injuria).

⁴⁰⁹ See, e.g., Maneklal Motilal v. Mohanlal Narotumdas, 44 Indian L.R. Bombay 496, 498-99 (App. Civ. 1919) (opinion of MacLeod, C.J.) (customary right of privacy); Gokal Prasad v. Radho, 10 Indian L.R. Allahbad 358, 385-87 (High Ct. 1888) (opinion of Edge, C.J.) (announcing recognition of a customary right to privacy after exhaustive review of previous cases).

⁴¹⁰ 381 U.S. 479, 484 (1965).

⁴¹¹ Govind v. State of Madhya Pradesh, 1975 A.I.R. (S.C.) 1378, 1385, 1386, [1975] 2 S.C.R. 148, 157, 158 (Ind.) (opinion of Mathew, J.).

⁴¹²Mohamed Ahmed El Naeem v. Adeel Osman, (1970) Sudan L.J. & R. 8, 9 (Ct. App.) (opinion of Dafalla El Radi Siddig, J.) (citing an English treatise on need for common law right to privacy).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Books

- P. Atiyah, The Rise and Fall of Freedom of Contract (1979).
- W. Austin, Literary Papers (J. Austin ed. 1890).
- E. Badeley, The Privilege of Religious Confessions in English Courts of Justice (London 1865).
- C. Baker, Tort (Concise College Texts, 3rd ed. 1981).
- T. Barnes, Open Up! (Fabian Tract 467, 1980).
- J. Bentham, The Works of Jeremy Bentham (J. Bowring ed. 1843).
- A. Bertillon, Signaletic Instructions (1896).
- W. Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England (Oxford 1765-1769).
- R. Bond, Handbook of the Telegraph (1870).
- H. Brougham, Historical Sketches of Statesmen Who Flourished in the Time of George III (London 1839).
- Task Force on Privacy & Computers, Can. Dep't of Communications & Dep't of Justice, Privacy and Computers (1972).
- Censorship and Obscenity* (R. Dhavan & C. Davies eds. 1978).
- Censuses, Surveys and Privacy* (M. Bulmer ed. 1979).
- J. Clerk & W. Lindsell, Torts (15th ed. 1982).
- R. Collier, English Home Life (1885).
- T. Cooley, Law of Torts (2d ed. 1888).
- M. Cranston, The Right to Privacy (Unservile State Papers No. 21, 1975).
- A. Dalrymple, Parliamentary Reform (2d ed. London 1792).
- P. Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals (1965).
- K. Ellis, The Post Office in the Eighteenth Century (1958).
- R. Emerson, English Traits (London 1856).
- Father of Candor, An Enquiry into the Doctrine, Lately Propagated,*

- Concerning Libels, Warrants and the Seizure of Papers (London 1764).
- H. Fraser, A Compendium of the Law of Torts (R. Burrows 11th ed. 1927).
- J. Garner, An Englishman's Home is his Castle? (1966).
- C. Gatley, Libel and Slander (R. McEwen & P. Lewis 6th ed. 1967).
- J. Gloag, The Englishman's Castle (1944).
- Haldane Club, The Law of Public Meeting and the Right of Police Search (New Fabian Research Bureau No. 13, 1941).
- A. Harlow, Old Post Bags (1928).
- H.L.A. Hart, The Concept of Law (1961).
- H.L.A. Hart, Law, Liberty, and Morality (1963).
- H. Heine, English Fragments (S. Norris trans. 1880).
- B. Hepple & M. Matthews, Tort: Cases and Materials (1974).
- C. Hewitt, Books in the Dock (1969).
- P. Hewitt, Privacy Report (1977).
- H. Hyde, Privacy and the Press (1947).
- The International Bill of Rights (L. Henkin ed. 1981).
- Justice (The British Section of the International Commission of Jurists), Freedom of Information (1978).
- Justice (The British Section of the International Commission of Jurists), Privacy and the Law (1970).
- E. Kenneth, The Post Office in the Eighteenth Century (1958).
- C. Kenny, A Selection of Cases Illustrative of the English Law of Tort (4th ed. 1926).
- N. Lasson, The History and Development of the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution (1937).
- H. Lauterpacht, An International Bill of the Rights of Man (1945).
- Law Reform Now (G. Gardiner & A. Martin eds. 1963).
- H. Levy, The Press Council (1967).

- F. Lieber, On Civil Liberty and Self-Government (Philadelphia 1853).
- J. Lucas, The Principles of Politics (1966).
- D. Madgwick, Privacy under Attack (1968).
- D. Madgwick & T. Smythe, The Invasion of Privacy (1974).
- J. Martin & A. Norman, The Computerized Society (1973).
- J.S. Mill, On Liberty (1st ed. London 1859) (G. Himmelfarb ed. 1974).
- J.S. Mill, Principles of Political Economy (1st ed. London 1848) (D. Winch ed. 1970).
- F. Montague, The Limits of Individual Liberty (1885).
- G. Murray, The Press and the Public (1972).
- R. O'Sullivan & R. Brown, The Law of Defamation (1958).
- J. Paterson, Commentaries on the Liberty of the Subject and the Laws of England Relating to the Security of the Person (1877).
- E. Pearce & D. Meston, Law Relating to Nuisances (1926).
- D. Pember, Privacy and the Press (1972).
- Political and Economic Planning, Report on the British Press* (1938).
- R. Posner, The Economics of Justice (1981).
- W. Pratt, Privacy in Britain (1979).
- Privacy* (M. Jones ed. 1974).
- Privacy* (J. Young ed. 1978).
- Privacy and Human Rights* (A. Robertson ed. 1973).
- Privacy, Computers and You* (B. Rowe ed. 1972).
- The Reform of the Law* (G. Williams ed. 1951).
- A. Robertson, Human Rights in Europe (2d ed. 1973).
- J. Rule, Private Lives and Public Surveillance (1973).
- J. Salmond & R. Heuston, The Law of Torts (R. Heuston & R. Chambers 14th ed. 1981).
- P. Sieghart, Privacy and Computers (1976).

- F. Stacey, A New Bill of Rights for Britain (1973).
- J. Stephen, Liberty, Equality, Fraternity (1st ed. 1873) (R. White ed. 1967).
- L. Stone, The Family, Sex, and Marriage in England, 1500 - 1800 (1977).
- H. Street, Freedom, The Individual and the Law (1963).
- H. Street, The Law of Torts (6th ed. 1976).
- J. Taylor, Old English Sayings Newly Expounded (London 1827).
- W. Tegg, Posts and Telegraphs, Past and Present (1878).
- A. Thompson, Big Brother in Britain Today (1970).
- W. Twining & D. Miers, How To Do Things With Rules (1976).
- R. Wacks, The Protection of Privacy (1980).
- D. Walker, The Law of Delict in Scotland (1966).
- M. Warner & M. Stone, The Data Bank Society (1970).
- J. Wartnaby & E. Pearce, An Englishman's Castle (1926).
- D. Watkinson & M. Reed, Squatting, Trespass and Civil Liberties (1976).
- J. Weir, A Casebook on Tort (2d ed. 1970).
- D. Weisstub & C. Gottlieb, The Nature of Privacy (1975).
- A. Westin, Privacy and Freedom (1967).
- G. Wharton, Legal Maxims (London 186?).
- Wicked, Wicked Libels* (M. Rubinstein ed. 1972).
- S. Wilcocke, A Letter to the Solicitor General on the Seizure of Papers (Montreal 1821).
- J. Wilkins, Mercury, or the Secret and Swift Messenger (London 1641).
- D. Yardley, The Future of the Law (1964).
- W. Young, The British Constitution of Government (2d ed. London 1793).

II. Articles

- Ackerman, Fact or Fancy?, 1 Notes & Queries (12th ser.) 509 (1916).
- Adam, Freemen of the Press?, 144 Fortnightly (n.s.) 34 (1938).
- Aide, English Criticism of American Society, 8 Our Day 94 (1891).
- Baistow, Privacy versus Freedom, 79 New Statesman 108 (1970).
- Barry, An End to Privacy, 2 Melb. U.L. Rev. 443 (1960).
- Beloff, The Inquisitive Society, 35 Encounter, Dec. 1970, at 49.
- Benn, The Protection and Limitation of Privacy (pts. 1 & 2), 52 Austl. L.J. 601, 686 (1978).
- Brittan, The Right of Privacy in England and the United States, 37 Tul. L. Rev. 235 (1963).
- Bryan, The Crossman Diaries -- Developments in the Law of Breach of Confidence, 92 Law Q. Rev. 180 (1976).
- Burns, Law and Privacy: The Canadian Experience, 54 Can. B. Rev. 1 (1976).
- Carson, Defining and Protecting Civil Liberties, 41 Pol. Q. 316 (1970).
- The Census, 23 Cornhill Magazine 415 (1871).
- Census Curiosities, 5 All the Year Round 15 (1861).
- Census of England and Wales and of the United Kingdom, 1881, 44 J. Statistical Soc'y 398 (1881).
- Christianson, The Right to Privacy, 61 New Statesman 288 (1961).
- Churchill, The Privacy of the Individual, 200 Spectator 649 (1958).
- Cline, The Argyll Decision, 213 Spectator 837 (1964).
- Cline, Invasion of Privacy, 204 Spectator 830 (1960).
- Cobbé, The Love of Notoriety, 8 Forum 170 (1889).
- Collins, The Cult of the Hyena, 123 Nineteenth Century 535 (1938).
- Computers and Privacy, 128 New L.J. 423 (1978).
- Editorial, Computers v. Privacy, 128 New L.J. 1205 (1978).

Editorial, Confidentiality and the Public Interest, 128 New L.J. 745 (1978).

Crawford, Decisions of the British Courts during 1976 - 1977, 48 Brit. Y.B. Int'l L. 333 (1978).

Curiosities of the Census, 22 N. Brit. Rev. 401 (1855).

Davis, What Do We Mean by "Right to Privacy"?, 4 S.D.L. Rev. 1 (1959).

The Defence of Privacy, 66 Spectator 200 (1891).

Note, Development of the Law of Privacy, 8 Harv. L. Rev. 280 (1894).

Developments in the Law -- The Interpretation of State Constitutional Rights, 95 Harv. L. Rev. 1324 (1982).

Dobry, Wire-tapping and Eavesdropping, ___ J. Int'l Comm. Jurists 319 (1958).

Duffy & Muchlinski, The Interception of Communications in Great Britain, 130 New L.J. 999 (1980).

Dworkin, Access to Medical Records -- Discovery, Confidentiality and Privacy, 42 Mod. L.R. 88 (1979).

Dworkin, The Common Law Protection of Privacy, 2 U. Tasm. L. Rev. 418 (1967).

Dworkin, Privacy and the Press, 24 Mod. L. Rev. 185 (1961).

Dworkin, The Right to be Left Alone, 67 Listener 503 (1962).

Dworkin, The Younger Committee Report on Privacy, 36 Mod. L. Rev. 399 (1973).

Englard, Book Review, 95 Harv. L. Rev. 1162 (1982).

The English, the Scots, and the Irish, Eur. Rev., Oct. 1824, at 63.

Ervine, The Invasion of Privacy, 138 Spectator 937 (1927).

Ervine, Privacy and the Lindberghs, 139 Fortnightly (n.s.) 180 (1936).

Evans, Computers and Privacy: The New Council of Europe Convention, 130 New L.J. 1067 (1980).

Everybody's Visitor and Nobody's Guest, 48 New Monthly Magazine 472 (1836).

Falconbridge, Desirable Changes in the Common Law, 5 Can. B. Rev. 581 (1927).

Fyfe, Pestering by the Press, 141 Fortnightly (n.s.) 304 (1937).

Galton, Identification by Finger-Tips, 30 Nineteenth Century 303 (1891).

Gavison, Privacy and the Limits of Law, 89 Yale L.J. 421, (1980).

Godkin, The Rights of the Citizen. -- IV. -- To His Own Reputation, 8 Scribner's Magazine 58 (1890).

Golsong, The European Convention on Human Rights before Domestic Courts, 38 Brit. Y.B. Int'l L. 445 (1962).

Gottschalk, Report of the Committee on Data Protection, 129 New L.J. 1065 (1979).

Green, The Right of Privacy, 27 Ill L. Rev. 237 (1932).

Grunhut, Personlichkeitssphäre im engl. und amerika-Recht, ___ Z. für g.St.W. 57 91962).

Gutteridge, The Comparative Law of the Right to Privacy (pt. 1), 47 Law Q. Rev. 203 (1931).

Hall, Some Elizabethan Penances in the Diocese of Ely, 1 Trans. Royal Hist. Soc'y (3d ser.) 263 (1907).

Hall, What the Census Really Means, 17 New Soc'y 665 (1971).

Hewitt, The Englishman's Front Door, 36 New Statesman 435 (1948).

Hewitt, Privacy, 61 New Statesman 746 (1961).

Hewitt, The Right to be Let Alone, 77 New Statesman 252 (1969).

Hewitt, Someone at the Door, 171 Twentieth Century, Spring 1962, at 49.

International Commission of Jurists, The Legal Protection of Privacy: A Comparative Survey of Ten Countries, 24 Int'l Soc. Sci. J. 417 (1972).

Jacob, Seven Dangers of Computers, 14 New Soc'y 940 (1969).

Jaconelli, The European Convention on Human Rights -- The Text of a British Bill of Rights?, 1976 Pub. L. 226.

Jones, Restitution of Benefits Obtained in Breach of Another's Confidence, 86 Law Q. Rev. 463 (1970).

Kalven, Privacy in Tort Law -- Were Warren and Brandeis Wrong?, 31 Law & Contemp. Probs. 326 (1966).

Kilbrandon, The Law of Privacy in Scotland, 2 Cambrian L. Rev. 35 (1971).

Lambert, Executive Authority to Tap Telephones, 43 Mod. L. Rev. 59 (1980).

Editorial, The Laws of Privacy and Confidence, 131 New L.J. 274 (1981).

Lawson, Credit Reference Agencies and the Consumer Credit Act, 127 New L.J. 57 (1977).

Letter-Opening at the General Post-Office, 39 Chambers's J. 395 (1863).

Lloyd, Reform of the Law of Libel, 5 Current Legal Probs. 168 (1952).

McCloskey, The Political Ideal of Privacy, 21 Phil Q. 303 (1971).

MacCormick, A Note upon Privacy, 89 Law Q. Rev. 23 (1973).

MacCormick, Privacy: A Problem of Definition?, 1 Brit. J. L. & Soc'y 75 (1974).

Marsh, Civil Liberties in Europe, 75 Law Q. Rev. 530 (1959).

Marsh, Hohfeld and Privacy, 89 Law Q. Rev. 183 (1973).

Marshall, The Right to Privacy: A Sceptical View, 21 McGill L.J. 242 (1975).

- Mathieson, Comment, 39 Can. B. Rev. 409 (1961).
- Maude, Privileged Communications, 48 Month 27 (1883).
- Middleton, A Right to Privacy?, 8 Jurid. Rev. (n.s.) 178 (1963).
- Merrick, Tapping Telephones in the United States, 129 New L.J. 575 (1979).
- Nathan, Eavesdropping (pts. 1-3), 225 Law Times 119, 135, 149 (1958).
- Neill, The Protection of Privacy, 25 Mod. L. Rev. 393 (1962).
- Newspaper Libels, 67 Saturday Rev. 462 (1889).
- Nokes, Professional Privilege, 66 Law Q. Rev. 88 (1950).
- North, Breach of Confidence: Is There a New Tort?, 12 J. Soc'y Pub. Teachers L. 149 (1972).
- Editorial, Not so Private Lives, 127 New L.J. 401 (1977).
- Editorial, Nothing for Privacy, 127 New L.J. 153 (1977).
- Opening Letters at the Post Office, 2 Law Magazine (n.s.) 248 (1845).
- Pannam, Unauthorized Use of Names or Photographs in Advertisements, 40 Austl. L.J. 4 (1966).
- Paton, Broadcasting and Privacy, 16 Can. B. Rev. 425 (1938).
- Paton, Note, 54 Law Q. Rev. 319 (1938).
- Perkins, The Origin of the Popular Press, 7 Hist. Today 425 (1957).
- Pescatore, Fundamental Rights and Freedoms in the System of the European Communities, 18 Am. J. Comp. L. 343 (1970).
- Phillipps, The New Journalism, 13 New Rev. 182 (1895).
- Post-Cards v. Envelopes, 47 Chambers's J. 565 (1878).
- Post-Office Espionage, 2 N. Brit. Rev. 257 (1844).
- The Post-Office Inquiry, 2 Littell's Living Age 407 (1844).
- Pratt, The Warren and Brandeis Argument for a Right to Privacy, 1975 Pub. L. 161.

Privacy, 1970 Crim. L. Rev. 125.

Privacy, 129 New L.J. 1191 (1979).

Editorial, Privacy and Official Powers, 130 New L.J. 793 (1980).

Privacy and the Law, 228 Law Times 233 (1959).

Privacy and the Press, 130 New L.J. 1191 (1980).

Editorial, Privacy -- Into the Breach Once More, 127 New L.J. 949
(1977).

Privacy -- We Don't Worry, We're British, Economist, Oct. 25, 1980, at 81.

The Privilege of Privacy, 69 Spectator 733 (1892).

Note, Publication of a Libel, 21 S. Afr. L.J. 183 (1904).

Recent Cases, 16 Minn. L. Rev. 220 (1932).

Recent Decisions, 32 Mich. L. Rev. 1172 (1934).

Right of Privacy, 128 New L.J. 823 (1978).

Note, The Right to Privacy in Nineteenth Century America, 94 Harv.
L. Rev. 1892 (1981).

Secrecy, 60 New Monthly Magazine 224 (1840).

Setting the Pace for Privacy, Economist, June 12, 1971, at 68.

Shooting Burglars, 76 Saturday Rev. 534 (1893).

Slade, Privacy and the Press, 189 Spectator 804 (1952).

Speed, Privilege of Communications Between a Solicitor and His Client, 28 Mod. L. Rev. 18 (1965).

Speed, The Right of Privacy, 163 N. Am. Rev. 64 (1896).

A Statute of Liberty?, 152 Economist 658 (1947).

Street, Privacy and the Law, 77 Queen's Q. 318 (1970).

Street, Privacy and the Law, 171 Twentieth Century, Spring 1962, at 35.

Street, Privacy and the Press, 189 Spectator 804 (1952).

Street, What the Law Can Do, 9 New Soc'y 758 (1967).

- Tapper, Computers and Privacy, 40 Mod. L. Rev. 198 (1977).
- Editorial, The Tappers Return, 203 Spectator 811 (1959).
- The Taste for Privacy and Publicity, 61 Spectator 782 (1888).
- Taylor, Privacy and the Public, 34 Mod. L. Rev. 288 (1971).
- Telephone Tapping, 129 New L.J. 291 (1979).
- Editorial, Telephone Tapping and the Law, 129 New L.J. 229 (1979).
- Thomas, An Englishman's Castle, 4 Household Words 321 (1851).
- The Unauthorised Use of Portraits, 3 Austl. L.J. 359 (1930).
- Vetch, Interests in Personality, 23 N. Ir. L.Q. 423 (1972).
- Vivian, Identity Cards and Liberty, 127 Nat'l Rev. 143 (1946).
- Wacks, Breach of Confidence and the Protection of Privacy, 127 New L.J. 328 (1977).
- Wacks, No Castles in the Air, 93 Law Q. Rev. 491 (1977).
- Wacks, Pop Goes Privacy, 41 Mod. L. Rev. 67 (1978).
- Wacks, The Poverty of "Privacy", 96 Law Q. Rev. 73 (1980).
- Wade, Post Office -- Interception of Messages, 16 Cambridge L.J. 6 (1958).
- Walton. The Comparative Law of the Right to Privacy (pt. 2), 47 Law Q. Rev. 219 (1931).
- Warren & Brandeis, The Right to Privacy, 4 Harv. L. Rev. 193 (1890).
- Wilkinson, Owning Up To Heaven, 127 New L.J. 957 (1977).
- Williams, The Crossman Diaries, 35 Cambridge L.J. 1 (1976).
- Williams, The Sale of Photographic Portraits, 24 Solic. J. 4 (1879).
- Williams, Telephone Tapping, 38 Cambridge L.J. 225 (1979).
- Winfield, The Foundation of Liability in Tort, 27 Colum. L. Rev. 1 (1927).
- Winfield, Privacy, 47 Law Q. Rev. 23 (1931).
- Winfield, Notes, 47 Law Q. Rev. 179, 326 (1931).
- Yang, Privacy: A Comparative Study of English and American Law, 15

Int'l & Comp. L.Q. 175 (1966).

Your Data, My Secrets, Economist, Nov. 22, 1975, at 70.

Zellick, Offensive Advertisements in the Mail, 1972 Crim. L. Rev.

724.

